We Also Come to Barter
Ford's Indirect Million
Beaverbrook on Russia
Mapping Out Relief

By Arthur Brisbane

ONE WEEK AGO, we learned that Russia was sending gasoline to South America, taking breeding cattle in exchange. That seemed quite amusing, "going back to ancient days of barter." Now the United States government has arranged with Brazil to exchange wheat for coffee. That is not amusing but businesslike. Adopt a good idea, no matter where you find it.

Bartering among nations thousands of miles apart tells what an uncertain thing our "magnificent financial system" is.

We have our gold standard, and five billions of gold piled away in the Treasury. We think we have solved the great problems of exchange, and we imagine, foolishly, that we understand money. Suddenly, we find ourselves trading wheat for coffee because the grand system of finance has broken down in a temporary world depression.

Demonetizing silver, destroying its value, is one cause of our troubles.

Senator Couzens, of Michigan, contributes one million dollars to the unemployed in Detroit, foreseeing trouble this winter.

It is interesting to reflect, without thus diminishing Senator Couzens' credit, that the million dollars given really comes from Henry Ford's industrial genius.

Senator Couzens invested a small sum, less than two thousand dollars, in Ford's enterprise long ago. Ford bought him out for more than thirty million dollars cash, and Ford's thirty millions supply the $1,000,000 which Detroit's unemployed will get from Couzens.

Lord Beaverbrook, able British publisher, says the Russian "five-year plan" must be a complete failure. His reasons for that belief would be interesting.

Ivan the Terrible carried out his plan, making Russia a nation. Peter the Great carried out his plan, changing Russia from an Asiatic to a European nation.

Stalin, from the Caucasus, an absolute Russian who calls himself "an Asiatic" and has his ancestral roots buried thousands of years, deep in Russia, might carry out his plan.

Peter imported English merchants, Italian artists, French mechanics and artisans of all kinds in his program. Stalin is importing American engineers, American machines, American methods.

The Russians are a great people, perhaps the greatest on earth in undeveloped power and undeveloped wealth. It is dangerous to underestimate them.

President Hoover and Walter S. Gifford, head of the telephone and telegraph company, have been "mapping out relief efforts" at Rapidan camp. Both are able men, both intent on avoiding conditions that threaten for the coming winter.

But how can you "map out relief." You can appropriate money, distributing it as widely and wisely as possible. But that would be the dreaded "dole" which our government fears as much as Satan is supposed to fear holy water.

It seemed all right to give forty millions to one street car company during the war, all right to give millions of acres of land to railroads for developing the country. It is all right to subsidize a shipping board with many millions.

But when you talk of giving 15 or 20 dollars a week, in real cash, to families whose heads are unemployed, our financial system shivers like an elephant with pneumonia.

Why? The answer is simple. Big taxpayers are afraid they will have to supply money for the dole, and big taxpayers are the government.

Something worse might happen to them, if they let things drift, and try to meet the temporary breakdown of their own industrial system with the help of charity organizations and inadequate public appeals.

Oil prices, too low, afflict natives in the Belgian Congo. The price of their oil and palm nuts has fallen more than 80 per cent.

Suddenly appeared a witch doctor, native priest, who enrolled the discontented savages in the religion of the "Satanoas." He promised that Satan would come, at night, through a subterranean passage, bringing money, provisions, clothes, would make crops grow in a single night, and make the bullets of white men go through the bodies of the Satanoas without hurting them.

The natives prepared presents for Satan, killed an agent of the Belgian government, cut up his

BIG FRAUD LAID TO R. I. LAWYER

Providence, Aug. 24 (INS)—A warrant for a prominent Providence lawyer on a charge of conspiracy to defraud in connection with an alleged shortage of more than $20,000 from the Rhode Island Mortgage Security Corp., will be issued tomorrow. Clifton I. Munroe, legal advisor of the safety board, announced today.

According to Munroe, who termed the case "the most barefaced swindle I have seen in many years," an audit of the corporation books showed a shortage of "above $20,000 and possibly $25,000."

Munroe said the criminal investigation had only begun and that several others may be involved.

Several months ago the Rhode Island Corp. merged with the Consolidated Mortgage and Investment Corp., now is in the hands of a receiver. Atty. Arthur Conaty, who has been conducting a rigid investigation into loans made on mortgages by officers of Consolidated.

Driver Gives Clue to Fleeing Convict

Portland, Me., Aug. 24 (AP)—George Ridley, a taxi driver, told police today he drove a man believed to be George Leavitt, 24, a convict, who escaped from Thomaston last Wednesday, to Dover, N. H., Sunday morning. The man arrived on an electric car from Lewiston.

Leavitt's two companions in the prison break, Roy Cook, 21, and William Merrill, 24, were captured in Woburn, Mass., Friday.

Say, Who Has Curley Gun Permit?

"Button, button, who's got the button?" used to be a great game, but there's a new one now:

"Who's got Mayor Curley's gun permit?"

The mayor said today he had received exactly nothing—except promises—as a result of applying for a permit to carry a revolver.

Police Supt. Michael H. Crowley, on the other hand, said today that the permit had been granted Saturday. How it was sent to the mayor, by whom it was sent, or whether it was sent at all, he would not say.

All of which adds more mystery to the whole affair.

Brookline Boy Held for False Alarm

William Clark, 16, of Addington rd., Brookline, was arrested today by Patrolman Cornelius F. O'Connor, charged with ringing a false alarm at Williston and Salisbury rds., and, according to the police, the arrest may solve a long series of false alarms in that town.

O'Connor searched almost the entire length of Beacon st. before he came upon a car he had seen in the vicinity of the fire alarm box and arrested Clark at Commonwealth ave. The boy pleaded not guilty and the case was continued to August 31.

3 HURT BADLY IN MELROSE CLUB FIRE

Three firemen were injured by a hot air explosion when a three-alarm fire of undetermined origin swept the three-story building of the Melrose City Club at 513-523 Main st., in the heart of the Melrose business section today, causing $38,000 damage.

The blaze raged through to the roof, driving customers and employes from stores on the ground floor, tying up traffic and calling aid from Malden and Wakefield.

Lieut. George Babcock and Fireman Frank Gibbons of Engine 2, who were inside the building, were burned on the hands, face and chest by the blast. They were assisted to safety by Asst City Electrician Henry Waldon and, after treatment in Melrose hospital, returned to duty.

Firemen Samuel Warren and Peter Lyons of Engine 2 were on a ladder which was hurled to the ground by the explosion. Lyons leaped to a window sill, where he clung until the ladder was again raised, but Warren fell to the ground and was shaken up and bruised.

BURST THROUGH ROOF

The fire apparently started in the rear of the first floor near bowling alleys, and worked up to the roof where it burned for some time before being discovered.

The flames finally burst through the roof and shot 40 feet into the air.

When firemen arrived the two upper stories, which had not yet been opened for business, were enveloped in flames.

A short time later an explosion occurred, blowing off the roof, much of which fell back into the burning building, and hurling down the ladder which Warren and Babcock were mounting.

Tht first floor is occupied by the Boston Dry Goods Store, Morris Feldman, proprietor; the Manhattan Market and an Atlantic & Pa-

Man Drops Dead on Boston Common

The body of an unidentified man about 38 years old was found today beside a bench on the Joy st. mall on Boston Common. A bruise on the side of the face is believed by police to have resulted from a fall from the bench after an attack of heart failure.

The man was five feet eight inches tall, weighed 140 and had light brown hair and a light complexion. He was dressed in a blue coat, dark gray trousers and a gray cap.

Japs Suspect Lindy of Being U. S. 'Spy'

Tokyo, Aug. 24 (AP)—Rengo, semi-official Japanese news agency, said today "suspicions" had been aroused because of the course followed by Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh along a certain portion of the Kurile Island route in their much-interrupted flight from Petropavlovsk, Kamchatka, to Nemuro, Japan.

The News Agency said Japanese authorities contended that the famous aviator and his wife had flown over prohibited areas and had descended twice in lakes where landings were prohibited, and on other waters not specified by the aviation bureau in the emergency descent permit which it issued at the request of the American embassy prior to Lindbergh's departure from Petropavlovsk.

High government officials apparently did not take the report seriously.

A report that Amy Johnson, British aviatrix, who because of storms returned to Osaka after reaching Fusan, Korea, would be questioned by the police had not reached government officials today.

However, government authorities expressed the belief that she might be asked, as a matter of routine, regarding her route, as police make out reports of such cases.

Lindbergh finally reached Nemuro today after having spent five days and made four forced land-

HULTMAN SUSPENDS ACCUSED OFFICERS

Blonde Mother Charges Two Patrolmen Attacked Her in Lonely Quarry

Weeping and half-hysterical, a pretty blonde young woman sat on the witness stand in West Roxbury court today and told a story of an attack by two Boston policemen who, she said, drove away her escort from a car parked in a quarry off Cummins highway, Roslindale, last Thursday night.

The two officers, Patrolman John Davy and Roland J. Kinsman, suspended by Commissioner Hultman pending the outcome of the hearing for warrants, were pointed out by the young woman as, between sobs, she answered the questions of Judge John Perrins.

Suspended with the two accused men was a third officer from Station 18, Patrolman Stephen J. Westhoff, charged with attempting to persuade Mrs. Fellows not to appear against his brother officers at the hearing.

According to Mrs. Fellows, Westhoff approached her after she made the complaint and asked her to "lay off" the two men accused of the assault.

"Mariano Faoli took me into his car in Forest Hills, shortly after dinner that night, and offered to drive me to Roslindale," Mrs. Evangeline "Sally" Fellows, the policemen's accuser, said.

"I had been drinking, and I don't remember some of the details of the ride.

DROVE ESCORT AWAY

"We parked near the quarry, and Faoli, whom I did not know, attempted to attack me. I fought him off, and was struggling to free myself from him in the car when flashlights appeared on each side of the machine.

"Two policemen ordered Faoli from the car, and one of them started to question him. The other stayed beside me.

"After a long talk with Faoli, they told him to 'beat it.' Faoli drove away.

"Then the two men made improper suggestions to me, and I refused their offers of liberty if I assented to their proposals. They threatened to take me to

BOSTON POLICE RADIO ORDER GOING TO COUNCIL

RUBY TO BRING MEASURE UP ON MONDAY

Effort Also Under Way to Link Whole State by Powerful New Holden Station

Installation of a short-wave radio system in the Boston police department for tracking criminals will be taken under consideration by the City Council at its meeting next Monday.

An order which will bring the matter before the council was prepared today by Councillor Israel Ruby of ward 14, Dorchester.

Meanwhile Capt. Thomas E. Bligh of the State police revealed today that efforts are being made to have every New England city and town linked by radio with a powerful station being built at the Holden barracks.

MARKS NEW EPOCH

As chief of state dectectives he plans to have all the detectives cars equipped with receiving sets, so that they may be in touch with headquarters at all times.

"All police departments should use radio," said Capt. Bligh. "Short-wave radio marks a new epoch in detection of crime and apprehension of criminals."

The question of adopting radio in the Boston police department was brought to the fore over the weekend by W. H. Crawford, a summer visitor at Swampscott, who, in a forceful letter, pointed out its proven advantages in other cities, where in some cases it has caught criminals "red-handed."

City Councillor Ruby prepared the following order for submission to his colleagues:

"Ordered that the police commissioner, through his honor the mayor be requested to study the suggestion contained in the news columns of the Boston Sunday Advertiser to the effect that the short wave radio broadcast system be adopted here, as a means of increasing the efficiency of the police department in its drive to check the activities of criminals in this city."

MAYOR'S OPPORTUNITY

After passage by the Council the order must go to the Mayor for his approval, and Mayor Curley will thus have an opportunity to affix his official endorsement to this proposed modernization of methods in the Boston police department.

It was the Mayor's recent application for a permit to carry a revolver that helped focus attention on police methods within the past few days.

Capt. Bligh, revealing the start of work on the installation of a new state police short wave station at Holden, said the present one at Framingham is of limited effectiveness. The Holden station will have a radius of 300 miles.

"Commissioner Foote, who is now abroad, has been in communication with officials throughout the New England states with the idea of having all New England hooked up with the new station," he said.

"Recent cases such as the capture of Robert Mahoney, the Dorchester boy, in his wild riding and shooting that night in the Worcester area, and the capture of escaped prisoners from Kinsman was serving a five-year term for forgery imposed a year ago. His home is in Stoughton.

Mrs. Theresa Walker, 32, of Linden st., Jamaica Plain, was found dead in the Bingham home Friday night. The couple denied all knowledge of how she got in the house, telling police they did not know she was there until they found her dead.

Arvin Walker, husband of the woman, urged an investigation, which iaclosed she had died following an illegela operation.

Springfield, Aug. 24—Police are investigating the mysterious disappearance from a securely locked cell at headquarters last night of James Mack, 19, of Chapin st.

CRIME AND DRY LAW LINKED

Williamstown, Aug. 24 (INS)—A breakdown in moral and religious standards was blamed here today for America's crime wave.

Prof. Arthur N. Holcombe of Harvard linked the breakdown with prohibtion as causes of crime in speaking before the Institute of Politics.

"Too many laws which so many people do not intend to obey make possible a wonderfully profitable trade for a new class of law-breakers," he said.

"It would be difficult to enforce any liquor law which would satisfy any parge part of our people because of the wide differences in personel standards."

SHOT MAN HELD IN GANGSTER MASSACRE

New York, Aroused by Outrages, Calls Monster Meeting to Battle Murderers

New York, Aug. 24 (AP)—Murray Leonardi, with a bullet in his abdomen, was held today as one of the killers of Anthony Ferrari in an "on the spot" murder in Brooklyn's "slaughter house" district last night.

At first it was believed Leonardi, 21, an ex-convict, was one of three men—Ferrari and Angelo Currani were the other two—who were put "on the spot" by five gunmen. Police, however, ordered him booked for murder after hearing the story of an eyewitness.

Eight men were in the automobile which drove away from a dance hall and stopped at a lumberyard in a little-frequented street. Ferrari and Currani were ordered out and were lined up against a fence.

WOUNDED ACCIDENTALLY.

Leonardi, police said, was with the five killers. In tha fusillade of shots that dropped Ferrari dead and Currani wounded, Leonardi was wounded as he stepped forward a little in advance of the others.

He was dragged back to the killers' car and taken to a hospital, from which the gunmen drove away before they could be questioned. Currani dragged himself to a garage not far from the execution spot and was taken to a hospital.

With this newest outrage as added incentive, plans were pushed for tonight's anti-crime mass meeting in Central Park, where Bainbridge Colby, former Secretary of State, will be general chairman.

GANG VICTIM BURIED

The criminal courts, the prosecuting staffs and the police department were represented at a conference at City Hall this morning called by Acting Mayor Joseph V. McKee to improve police methods of dealing with gunmen and to consider anti-crime measures.

Police Commissioner Mulrooney was not present when the conference started. He was attending the funeral of Patrolman Edwin V. Churchill, who was one of six persons killed Friday in the bandit chase in the Bronx.

The funeral procession moved through a drizzling rain, with the flag-draped casket borne by members of Churchill's own police squad and with 150 uniformed policemen in line.

The funerals of other victims of the bandit murderers, including four-year-old Gloria Lopez, will be conducted tomorrow.

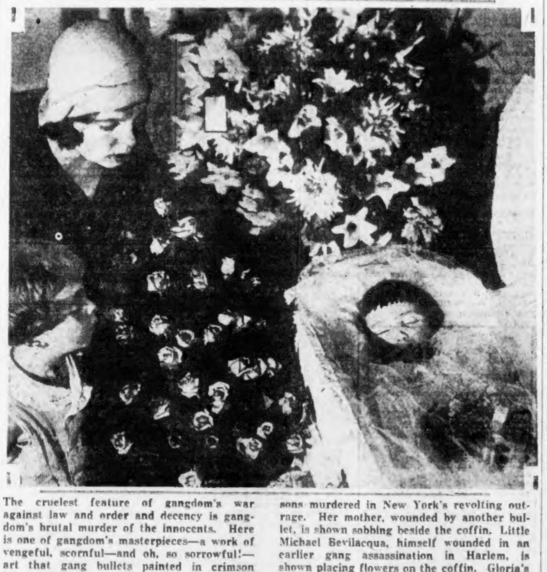
Greenwich, Conn., Aug. 24 (INS)—Miss Tamara Geva, 24, an actress, and Kapa Davidoff, 33, both of New York, filed an application for a marriage license in Town Hall here today.

CAN GANGDOM EVER EXPIATE THIS CRIME?



The cruelest feature of gangdom's war against law and order and decency is gangdom's brutal murder of the innocents. Here is one of gangdom's masterpieces—a work of vengeful, scornful—and oh, so sorrowful!—art that gang bullets painted in crimson blood. Here is Gloria Lopez in her snowy coffin. She was one—the youngest—of six persons murdered in New York's revolting outrage. Her mother, wounded by another bullet, is shown sobbing beside the coffin. Little Michael Bevilacqua, himself wounded in an earlier gang assassination in Harlem, is shown placing flowers on the coffin. Gloria's funeral takes place tomorrow. Tonight, Law in New York plans to avenge her. (I.N.S. photo)

SAYS BOTH ATTACKED HER

Here the pretty young woman, mother of a 7-year-old boy, sobbed convulsively, and the hearing was suspended momentarily while she regained her composure.

"Both the officers attacked me, I was crying—I was nearly wild."

She broke down again.

"I pleaded with them—begged them to leave me alone. It did no good.

"Then, hardly knowing what I was doing, I started to stagger toward Hyde Park ave. One of the policemen asked me if I had carfare. I said yes, and went on. I intended to commit suicide by throwing myself under a street car. It's all a blur for a while there. remember dimly of wandering around in the street.

THREATENED ARREST.

"Then a woman came out of a house and took me by the arm. She questioned me, but I couldn't answer coherently. Another woman came out of the house, and later brought out a man. They went with me to the police station, where I told my story.

"Some of the things I don't remember very clearly. More than anything else, I remember their threatening me with arrest unless I did as they wanted me to. Before they attacked me they tried to make me tell them my name and where I lived. I wouldn't do it.

"After they sent Faoli away they had a long talk. I was so tired from fighting Faoli off that I hadn't much strength left to fight when the two policemen attacked me.

"ENOUGH TROUBLE"

"There was nothing wrong in my not wanting to give my name. I was innocent, and I have a family to think of, and I have a case pending now in Probate Court. It seemed to me that I was in enough trouble."

Faoli was also at the hearing. A warrant is sought for him for the attempted attack with which Mrs. Fellows charged him.

Mrs. Fellows said she had attended a baseball game that afternoon with two men from Roslindale whom she refused to name. After she had dinner with her two friends and drank four glasses of beer, she said she waited for a street car until Faoli drove up in his car.

FEARS TROUBLE

After Faoli's approaches had become ofensive, she said she asked him to let her out of the automobile. Then, she said, came the struggle in the dark with Faoli, then the advent of the policemen, and then her combined attack upon her.

Mrs. Fellows lives with her mother and her son in Paplar st., Roslindale.

"It breaks my heart to know my mother must hear about this," she said. I am afraid now of what I have done in bringing these charges. I supose I will get into trouble for it later, but I am determined to bring these men to justice and save some other girl the horrible experience I suffered."

The domestic new problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

AMERICANS ARE BLAMED FOR U. S. CRIME

Aliens Wrongfully Pictured, Wickersham Report to Hoover Declares

Washington, Aug. 24 (US)—The Wickersham commission, in its final report to President Hoover, finds that Americans and not aliens are responsible for the crime in the United States.

The report is on "crime and the foreign born." As in previous reports, the commission said its investigation is incomplete and urged President Hoover to have the study continued.

BRIEF INTRODUCTION

The commission in its foreword said:

"In proportion to their respective numbers the foreign born approach the record of the native born most closely in the crimes of violence, and that in crimes for personal gain the native born greatly exeeds the foreign born."

While the commission absolved the foreign born or alien, it said that the children of aliens might be at fault for the general assumption that "foreigners are criminals."

In conclusion the commission said, "there was always present a temptation to rally public opinion around the cry of "Americ for Americans," and added:

"At various points in our history this impulse has become acute and had important political consequences. But it is interesting to note that each time the outcry is raised, the 'Americans,' for whom 'America' is to be reserved, include the descendants of a former generation of immigrants against whom the same outcry was earlier raised as a basis of discrimination or exclusion.

EVADING THE ISSUE

In her special report, Dean Edith Abbot said that:

"Charging our high crimes against the foreign born is merely evading the real difficulties of life instead of trying to solve them."

Dempsey's Wife on Way East for Stage Tour

Hollywood, Aug. 24—Estelle Taylor, Jack Dempsey's estranged actress wife, is heading for the east today, ready to go back to work and save the family homestead over which she and the former heavyweight champion have been legally fighting. As she boarded a train here her main concern, she indicated, was a huge purse that will come back loaded with $3000 for each week of her contemplated two months' absence on a vaudeville tour.

"I do not know anything about Jack Dempsey," was her only comment when questioned about his Reno divorce action.

Revise Morals Before Economic Laws, Urges Shaw

London, Aug. 24—George Bernard Shaw has propounded another aphorism. This time he lays the world's ills to human moral failings rather than economic laws. He says:

"The trouble is that everybody is talking about the economic situation when they really ought to be discussing the moral situation. They want to revise everything but human conduct, but it is human conduct that should be revised. When we get that right, the world will be better."

New York, Aug. 24 (INS)—A drizzling rain today marred the welcome-home celebration for two more triumphant fliers, John Polando of Lynn and Russell Boardman of Boston, who set a record on their New York-to-Turkey flight.

Only a small crowd cheered them during the parade up Broadway after they had landed from the liner Excalibur, but that crowd stood faithfully in the rain, mingled with the ticker tape that added to the shower.

HONORED IN PARADE.

Polando was overjoyed, regardless of the reception, for he had just heard from his wife that his step-daughter, Margaret, 12, ill in his Peabody (Mass.) home, is suffering from sinus trouble, and not infantile paralysis as first reported.

The fliers were met at quarantine by the municipal boat Macom and landed at the Battery. After the parade to City Hall they were welcomed by Acting Mayor McKee. Their wives were with them.

Boardman said the reason they did not continue with their flying and circumnavigate the world near the Equator was that weather reports were poor.

REST ON LAURELS

Neither wants to make another similar flight unless their record for long distance is surpassed.

"We are confident we could have gone 6000 miles," Boardman said. "In crossing the Alps we ran into a heavy haze that bothered us. We got our bearings by recognizing certain peaks and lakes."

Tomorrow the fliers will take off for Boston after their plane has been assembled at Newark airport. It was dismantled to be shipped here on the liner with them. The fliers also will receive an ovation in Boston.

O'NEILL, 'OIL EXILE, DIES

Tulsa, Okla., Aug. 24 (AP)—Word was received here today of the death in Cannes, France, of James E. O'Neill, 5, oil man, who became an exile from the United States to evade testifying in Teapot Dome oil lease conspiracy case.

O'Neill resigned the presidency of the Prairie Oil & Gas Co. in 1923 and a few months later went to Europe. He said he preferred to live abroad rather than testify against friends.

A brother, George O'Neill, independent oil operator or Wicita, Kas., died in a hospital here Aug. 18.

O'Neill was one of two witnesses who fled to Europe to escape testimoney in the Teapot Dome case. Harry M. Blackmer of Denver, former chairman of the Midwest Refining Co., the other, is still abroad.

"The idea," Prof. Pitkin writes, "is to supply chain stores with food from chain farms."

RENO CURIOUS OVER DREISER

Reno, Aug. 24—Accustomed to providing at least temporary residence for persons of national and international prominence, Reno was showing no undue curiosity today in the local appearance of a new celebrity, Theodore Dreiser, author of "An American Tragedy" and other works.

Dreiser was recently seen in the nation's divorce capital when he paid a visit to Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., central figure in the widely heralded Vanderbilt-Arno imbroglio.

It was learned today that Dreiser is living in Glenbrook, on the six weeks' residence side of Lake Tahoe; that he is not accompanied by his wife and that he is admittedly working on a new novel.

He refused either to admit or deny that his Nevada residence may have bearing on his matrimonial status. Mrs. Dreiser, the former Sarah Osborne White of St. Louis, married the author in 1898.

ROXBURY YOUTH SHOT IN HOLDUP

A youth, charged with the holdup of a Roxbury theater manager and his girl companion early today, was dying in City Hospital from a shot fired by the theater man. Police are seeking a second man implicated in the holdup.

Charles C. Ward, 19, of Howard st., was shot through the body police charge, as he and a companion fled the scene of the hold-up of Joseph Goldberg and Miss Sadie Nespman as they sat in a car in front of Miss Nespman's house in Homestead st.

Goldberg, manager of the Dudley Theater, Roxbury, and Miss Neapman were approached by two youthful bandits, each armed with an automatic pistol.

"Put up your hands and get out, or we'll blow your brains out," said one of the men, thrusting his gun against Goldberg's head.

Goldberg got out of the car, hands aloft, and was "frisked" of $40 in cash, a valuable gold watch and his wallet, containing his automobile license registration and a police permit to carry a pistol.

After robbing Goldberg, the two youths fled down Homestead st. Goldberg seized a pistol from the side pocket of his car and fired at them. One of the youths staggered, recovered himself, and continued his flight.

An hour later Patrolman John Tobin of the Dudley st. station, patrolling his beat in Howard st., watched a youth in shirt sleeves reel into a dooryard. Tobin hurried into the yard, and caught the youth as he collapsed. The back of his shirt was saturated with blood.

FOUND SHOT ON OWN DOORSTEP

Charles Mancusi, 25, of Everett st., East Boston, was found mysteriously wounded today on his doorstep by a neighbor.

At the East Boston relief hospital where his condition was described as critical, he told police he accidentally shot himself while cleaning the gun.

Inspector James A. Dennessey, homicide expert, was assigned to the case because of unexpained aspects, including the position of the wound, which is in Mancusi's chest, near the right armpit.

The gun, a new .32 calibre revolver, which was found in Mancusi's apartment, was taken by police for examination.

Investigation by Sergt. Frank McTiernan and Special Officer Philip Whaland showed that Mancusi was shot in his third floor apartment and staggered to the street door, where he collapsed.

Neighbors who heard the shot did not see anybody leave the house. Frank Rapseo, living nearby on Everett st., saw the wounded man fall and went to his aid. Mancusi lived with his father and is an airport employe.

SOMERSET WEDS NO. 4 AND NOBODY SUES!

MARGARET BANNERMAN

EDITH DAY

SHELBY WORRELL

Pat Somerset, famed British actor, got the idea in three marital ventures, no doubt, that he couldn't wed without a court battle resulting. He was wrong. He has taken his fourth bride now, Barbara Todd, golden-haired society beauty—and nothing happened in the courts. Margaret Bannerman, his No. 1, who divorced him, is shown above. Pat and his No. 4 are honeymooning near Hollywood. (I. N. R. photos.)

PAT SOMERSET

Carleton tried to have him deported for moral turpitude, but failed and Edith divorced him and wed Somerset. Divorced again, he wooed Irene Martin, wife of "Skeets" Gallagher, and Gallagher also tried, and failed, to have the actor deported. No. 3 was Shelby Worrell, beauty. She died in his arms.

At last Leo O'Brien, assistant janitor, smelled gas and directed police to a top floor suite, occupants of which are away for the summer. There they found Mrs. Margaret Garnham unconscious and three jets of the gas range open.

She was resusciated, and, according to doctors, will recover. Her husband said she was despondent as the result of the death of a sister.

$250,000,000 IS SUM SET TO HELP NEEDY

President to Appeal to Generosity of American People to Contribute the Fund

Washington, Aug. 24 (INS)—President Hoover's plan for relieving unemployment distress next winter through local agencies got under way today as his newly created national relief organization prepared to open headquarters in the capital.

The President's plan for feeding, clothing and sheltering the unemployed will "test the generosity of the American people as never before in history," as one of his spokesman explained.

The national organization, under Walter S. Gifford, New York business executive, will merely serve to spur on and co-ordinate local relief movements.

$250,000,000 NEEDED

A fund of approximately $250,000,000 must be raised by private and semi-public agencies, it was learned, to make the President's plan successful.

If the local agencies fail to reach this mark or that fund proves insufficient, the administration undoubtedly will be forced into the appropriation of federal funds. Thus far, the administration's plan includes no such provision.

The co-ordination program was discussed at length by the President at a week-end conference in his Virginia mountain retreat with Gifford and Fred Croxton, who headed the President's unemployment commission last winter.

They were returning from the camp today, with Gifford and Croxton ready to open headquarters in the Department of Commerce.

DRIVES PLANNED

The vast amount necessary for relief work next winter was indicated when three cities—New York, Detroit, and Philadelphia—reported drives for a total of $50,500,000.

Detroit headed the list with a program for $20,500,000, with Senator James Couzens of Michigan offering to contribute $1,000,000 personally, if the city could raise $9,000,000 from other sources.

New York reported a drive would be made to raise $20,000,000, while the Philadelphia goal was set at $10,000,000.

BALDWIN TO AID M'DONALD IN COALITION

George will call a special meeting of the privy council at Buckingham Palace to swear in the new cabinet.

FOR SMALLER CABINET

MacDonald's plan is to form a small cabinet of 12 or 14 ministers instead of the usual 20. The retiring Labor cabinet had 21 members.

"I shall be in the new government," said J. H. Thomas, secretary for Dominions, as he left Mr. MacDonald's office later in the day.

Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, also seemed certain to remain, with a half a dozen others as a Labor bloc.

At least nine of the Labor cabinet who opposed economy measures probably will have no place in the new government.

LLOYD GEORGE UNMOVED

David Lloyd George, Liberal leader, who recently underwent a major operation, was told the news at his home.

"I'm not surprised," was his laconic comment.

He still holds his strategic political position. He has held the balance of power since the Labor government took office.

Balancing the budget to wipe out an impending deficit of $600,000,000 will be the task of the new cabinet, and it is not expected to last beyond January 1.

There probably will be a special session of Parliment, and after the nation's finances are straightened out a general election.

Mr. MacDonald's government came into office on June 9, 1929.

It was wrecked on the rocks of the unemployment dole and a proposal for new taxation. It proposed to stave off the deficit by levying $300,000,000 in new taxes and lopping off about the same amount from national expenditures, mainly by cutting the dole.

But the powerful Trades Union Congress cried "hands off the dole" and the leaders of the political opposition retorted "no more taxes."

LINDY LANDINGS UNDER PROBE IN JAPAN

ings in negotiating the 897-mil trip.

Prior to leaving Petropavlovsk the Lindberghs applied to the American embassy for an emergency landing permit, which was granted by the Aviation Bureau without hesitation.

DESIGNATED PLACES

The permit designated Kakunabetsu, Paramushir Island and Muroton Bay, Shimushiru Island, as emergency landing places. The Lindberghs encountered fog a few hours out of Petropavlovsk and landed at Ketoi Island, 15 miles from Muroton Bay, after they had been unable to locate the latter place through the fog.

After leaving Muroton Bay and again encountering fog, they radioed Ochiishi station in Nemuro requesting designation of a nearby emergency landing.

Aviation Officer Tanaka specified Bettobu, but Lindbergh landed at Shana instead, explaining later that the visibility was so poor that they could not distinguish Bettobu.

Rengo quoted the authorities as saying the course the Lindberghs were permitted to take was along the east side of the Kuriles, and not over any of the islands, and that the prohibited area includes Kunashiri, where the fliers spent last night.

Authorities still were talking about the flight, but there was no indication as to what, if any, action would be taken.

TREMENDOUS OVATION

The fliers were hurried ashore in a launch, escorted by city officials. They raised their hands in acknowledgement of the tremendous ovation. Mrs. Lindbergh bowed and smiled.

Hundreds of school children waved Japanese and American flags and chorused a welcome.

The Colonel smiled and said: "We are a bit late."

Hurried to their hotel for a moment's rest, the Lindberghs were soon forced to come to their balcony and acknowledge the tribute of immense throngs that gathered in the adjacent streets. Again the Colonel spoke.

"We are glad to be in Nemuro," he said. "Thank You; thank you."

Col. Lindbergh said the worst experience of the flight from Petropavlovsk were the perplexing fogs they encountered while trying to land here Sunday, forcing them back to Annoro bay, and the transfer of the plane from Ketoi island to Muroton bay, Shimushiru island, at the end of a tow line attached to a Japanese government steamer.

The top floor housed dance and assembly halls.

An investigation was started to determine the cause of the fire, which it was thought might have been spontaneous combustion.

Looking Over the Caterpillar Club

By Authur "Bugs" Baer

Notice that the Japanese invitation read, "Meet Mrs. Lindbergh, daughter of Senator Morrow, and her husband."

Her husband is Lindy. But the Japanese are so polite they judge distinguished visitors by our cigarette ads.

Lindy hung up a new towing record last week on a sixty-foot cable. He ate a sandwich before the rope broke.

Haven't heard anything about Pangborn and Herndon since Tokio fined them a thousand dollars for taking a picture without Clark Gable in it. They fine you in Hollywood for the same thing.

The boys started out as good-will ambassadors but must have jettisioned their load.

You are not allowed to take snaps of Japanese ambuscades. Over there the fortifications are as mysterious as the one General Smedley Butler captured in Haiti. Or was it Philadelphia?

All our other fliers are home and doing fine. The army bombers had a perfect test sinking a boat sixty miles off the coast.

They didn't hit the boat once. But they didn't damage any surrounding property. And that's some sort of record.

MADDEN CALLS ON ELY TO FIRE HULTMAN

In a sweeping denunciation of Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman, Rep. William F. Madden of Roxbury today wrote to Gov. Ely demanding that he ask for the resignation of the police head.

"I hope His Excellency will demand Hultman's resignation at once," Madden wrote, "and appoint some one who is capabe of running the job right. Let us not wait until it is too late and we find ourselves on a par with New York and Chicago."

Madden criticised Hultman for being absent from the city over the week-end when "crime was rampant." He charges the police head with being satisfied with a Monday morning report instead of staying on the job.

ASKS ABOUT SCHWARTZ

Madden asked the governor to question Hultman about Leo Schwartz, police legal adviser, taking charge of the department over the week-end and issuing orders to captains of divisions while Supt. Crowley and Deputy Supt. McDevitt were still on duty.

Madden hinted at graft in connection with the new uniforms of the police department.

"I have been told," the letter stated, "that somebody in Hultman's office is connected with firm makes the new uniforms. If that is so, then we can see the reason for the disregard of the welfare of the men on the force."

FAKE AUCTIONS

Madden charged that the uniforms will cripple the men. He claims that there have been many cases of blood poison, various veins and rheumatism, directly laid to the new uniforms.

Madden also attacked Hultman for alleged failure to get rid of "gyp" jewelry auctions in the city despite the efforts of the Boston Better Business Bureau to oust the auctioneers.

He declares that the bureau has pointed out to the public that these "crooked" auctions have fleeced people out of enough money to take care of hundreds and possibly thousands of unemployed Bostonians.

BOOK SWINDLER PUT IN ASYLUM

Harold E. Clarke, who at Boston police headquarters last June "confessed" to being a cog in a $500,000 book theft racket, was sent to the Worcester State Hospital today for 30 days' observation for his sanity.

This action was taken by Judge Daniel T. O'Connell in Superior Court in Worcester on recommendation of Clarke's counsel, Robert J. Curran of Boston. Clarke was in court for arraignment, having been indicted by the grand jury last week.

He is charged with larceny of rare books from the public library in the town of Lancaster.

His arrest took place last June in Revere and he told of being linked with racketeers who had "lifted" $500,000 worth of first editions from libraries. A large case of books was found at an express office in the South Station under his name.

In spite of his colorful "confession," Lancaster police believed he was working alone.

Missing Diving Rudder Delays Under-Water Tour of Wilkins' Arctic Sub

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS

Aboard the Nautilus, at Sea, Aug. 24—With spray freezing on deck and great ice caps heaving about her sides, the Nautilus, after reaching within almost 500 miles of the North Pole, had to get away from among the heavy pack ice to greater safety in open water.

In Ice Field

Sir Hurbert Wilkins

In fog, snowstorm, wind and sleet it was impossible to judge ice conditions and it was extremely unsafe to lie among the loose but heavy pack.

Had we been further in among the larger floes it would have been much safer. For hours we have been lying in a patch of open water, our lead all set for diving under as soon as conditions improve.

When Capt. Danenhauer was looking through the clear water over our stern he noticed something missing from behind the propeller. Closer inspection showed that it was the diving rudder.

The vessel was put in the lee of the ice. It was late Saturday night when Diver Frank Crilly, who bravely volunteered for the job, was lowered between ice fragments to inspect the vessel's stern. He was down for several minutes and then reported that both sides of the diving rudder were gone. The steering rudder was intact and in good order.

ABSENCE OF RUDDERS MYSTERY

It is a mystery what became of the diving rudders and how they could have left the ship without damaging the steering rudder, but the fact remains that they are gone. Our ordinary steering gear is safe.

Crilley, warmly dressed, went down for a few minutes today, and, after a stiff battle, said that diving in Arctic waters was not as terrifying as it looked from the surface. He said he was unable to see a thing through his helmet.

Crilley, during his dive, had not known that a huge cake of ice came near crushing him against the side of the deck.

Quartermaster Edward Clark, Oiler Raymond Drakio and Ray E. Meyers, chief radio operator, went to his assistance and helped him to safety.

JAR IN BATTERY CRACKS

We also discovered that a jar in the battery tank had cracked.

Clarence D. Holland and Cornelius Royster, assistant electricians, aided by three others of the crew, worked on the cell, but had to jump it (eliminate it) to get the bank going again. We are now getting along without the jar in trouble.

The acid from the cell was spilled all over the hull. This cell, we believe, was cracked through too rapid charging. When it was repaired, the work called for speed. Due to the lateness of the season in the Arctic, making the danger much greater than we anticipated, we had to charge the bank of batteries in a hurry to get under way before the weather and ice conditions became worse. Every delay meant greater danger.

Rum Boat Is Found Soaked With Blood

Port Jefferson, N. Y., Aug. 24 (AP)—The 50-foot yacht Artemis, powered with three Liberty motors and valued at $35,000, was found blood-soaked and bullet-riddled today in a local shipyard.

Missing since Thursday night, when the powerful motors driving her at 45 knots an hour enabled her to escape after a battle with a coast guard cutter off Greenport she was discovered by an investigator for Dist. Atty. Blue.

Two of her crew, both of Greenport, are in the hospital with wounds, one in critical condition.

At the Long Island shipyard, no one could tell the district attorney who owned the Artemis, or who gave orders for her to be made seaworthy.

MAN WITH PEN PISTOL FINED

A new type of fountain pen pistol was revealed in municipal court today when Tong Lee of Hudson st., South End, was arraigned on charges of illegal possession of morphine and hypodermic needles, and a dangerous weapon.

Sergt. Thomas J. Ryan testified Lee was arrested with 13 other Chinese in a raid at the Hudson st. address and at police headquarters the pistol was found in his vest pocket.

The weapon resembled a fountain pen, but has a plunger operated by a heavy spring. The barrel could be unscrewed in the center, and a .38-caliber cartridge inserted.

Judge Elijah Adlow fined Lee $25 each on the narcotic counts, and placed him on probation for six months on the pistol charge.

The other 13 Chinese, charged with being present where gaming instruments were found, were acquitted.

The perfect kiss has been defined at last. See how it should and should not be done . . . in the American Weekly in the next (August 30) Boston Sunday Advertiser.

BOSTON TALKER HELD AS 'RED'

Worcester, Aug. 24—Irving Keith, 21, of Harrison ave., Boston, pleaded not guilty to a charge of advocating the overthrow of the present government, and was held in $500 for the grand jury by Judge Jacob Asher.

Keith was arrested with two other men last Saturday on the Common here during a meeting of the International Labor Defense League. Keith said he was talking about the Declaration of Independence, although police allege he was talking about the Sacco-Vanzetti affair.

Henry Gilman, 48, and Michael Metofk, 38, both of Worcester, were fined $10 for disturbing the peace.

Girl Flicks Ashes, Auto Is Wrecked

Ralph C. Vaughan, 20, of Avalon rd., Waban, will take time off, while driving, to knock the ashes from his own cigaret after this, and Betty Benson, 16, will let him.

Betty, who lives in Hartford st., Newton, took Vaughan's cigaret from him today to knock off the ash, as they rode in his car in Beacon st., Chestnut Hill.

The ash flew into Vaughan's eyes, and, temporarily blinded, he lost control of the car which crashed into a telephone pole. Vaughan was unhurt, but the girl went to a hospital with numerous cuts about the head and legs.

Peach Punch (Fist Variety) Costs a Peach Man $10

A peach of a collision, a spilled load of peaches, and a peach of a right-hand punch cost James Ruma, a pedlar, $10 in Municipal Court today on charges of assault and battery.

Evidence disclosed that Ruma's pushcart had been upset by a truck in Blackstone st. Saturday, and the load of peaches spilled on the street. Samuel Winer of Balsam st., Dorchester, with other spectators, rushed to Ruma's assistance. Winer was armed with a shovel and began to load the fruit on the cart.

Suddenly, police say, Ruma uncorked the right haymaker to Winer's chin, and the arrest followed.

"I find the defendant guilty," said Judge Elijah Adlow. "It seems to me if a fellow offers to help, he should be greeted with something else than a punch in the jaw."

MELLON CUT IN PHOTO BLAST

New York, Aug. 24 (AP)—Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, returning from Europe today, was cut on the hand by fragments of flashlight bulb, and then, because of a mistake in arrangements, was driven through town in an automobile formerly used by rum-runners.

The cut from the exploding bulb was slight and after treatment on board the liner, Mr. Mellon transferred to a cutter which landed him at the battery, while his automobile was waiting at the pier where the liner was to dock.

Customs officials pressed into service a confiscated car which until three weeks ago was being used for running smuggled liquor across the Canadian border.

In this automobile the secretary of the treasury rode through the financial district to the Federal Reserve Bank, where he held a conference with the institution's governor prior to taking an afternoon train for Washington.

POLICE BULLET STOPS YOUTH

Firing a shot after a car leaving the scene of a crash on Washington st., Brookline, today, Patrolman Wilbur R. McMillan halted the machine and arrested the driver, Robert Wheeler, 21, of Scituate.

Wheeler was charged with driving while under the influence of liquor and larceny of an auto. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $500 bail by Judge Wyner of Brookline court.

The car was stolen on Hemenway st., Back Bay, and, according to the police, the youth has a record dating back five or six years.

Maine, show the effectiveness of the use of radio in police work.

SETS FOR POLICE CARS

"I am going to recommend to Commissioner Foote that all state detectives have receiving sets put in their cars, which are privately owned. You can't make a police force too effective, and every progressive police head is shouting for radio."

It was learned that plans of the state police to broadcast about crimes and criminals to all cities and towns throughout Massachusetts had been handicapped by local officials, who protested the state was "reaching out for power."

Police Commissioner Hultman, when asked to comment on the growing demand for police radio, with radio-equipped automobiles or "cruisers" at strategic points, ready to dash to the scene of a crime, made this brief statement:

"Our new signal system, which was invented here in Boston and which we are now installing throughout the city, is far superior to radio, insofar as reliability and efficiency are concerned. That is all that I have to say."

LIGHT SIGNALS

Commissioner Hultman, when fire commissioner, installed the first fire department short-wave radio in the country. When he became police head he commented that criminals could equip themselves with radio sets to listen in on police orders. Since then he has made a study of the light signal system, already installed under his direction in Brighton and Jamaica Plain.

The efectiveness of police radio in Detroit, the first city to use it, is described in another column of the Boston Evening American today.

"The suggestion of police radio for Boston should be adopted by Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman and should have the support of all law-abiding citizens," said Councilor Ruby.

"It is the first time the suggestion has been made in Boston and I trust it will be immediately adopted by the police commissioner. A motorized police department without such a system is as helpless as a blind man groping about in unfamiliar territory.

"The officers and men of the Boston police department are the equal in ability and courage of those in any law-enforcement body in the entire world. They have demonstrated this on many occasions.

POLICE HANDICAPPED.

"Their activities are, however, handicapped by failure to equip them with radio. Police automobiles are not operating to maximum efficiency when not in touch by radio with headquarters.

"Other great cities are ridding themselves of dangerous criminals and quickly placing the responsibility for crime by use of short-wave radio, with receiving sets in autos moving about the city.

"Sometimes a good suggestion is ignored by persons in authority, because it did not originate with them. I trust that such a thing will not happen in this instance."

A man who has seen the refinements of gang warfare in the country's "hotspots" and who has weathered the storm of grim gang bullets, knows the check that the police radio system has exercised in two of the country's nests of hoodlumism.

He has seen the radio work in Detroit, the birthplace of police radio. In that bullet-ridden district he has ridden with cruising police cars, attuned to a central station, and has heard them listen to a man downtown say:

"There is a burglar at work at 2365 Grand River ave., on the second floor."

He has ridden with that car as it turned in its route, whirled back to the Grand River ave. address, and trapped the man at work in the purlieus of Grand River ave. before he was well started in his night's work.

The effect of the radio police station in crime prevention has been observed without police circles here, and officials of the leading radio stations in Boston have followed Crawford's suggestions and offered their facilities to the police department.

Said Linus J. Travers of Station WNAC:

"This station will give its wholehearted support to the Boston police in the routine of radio crime broadcasts."

USED BY STATE POLICE

The state police already use the radio for the dissemination of information. At certain hours each day all activities in every barracks of the state police cease and the troopers gather around the radio to hear the broadcast from the State House:

"This is the state police station broadcasting—" and a description of stolen cars and known lawbreakers follows.

Meanwhile, anticipating the possible action of the police department, station WNAC has already arranged with the district attorneys of the three counties—Middlesex, Suffolk and Norfolk—in the Greater Boston area, to handle emergency broadcasts to such of their law enforcing agencies as are equipped with radio facilities.

At the quarterly-hour breaks in the regular station programs, crime flashes will be sent over the air on the regular station channels. Such officers as may be listening in at these hours will get descriptions of lawbreakers and outlines of their crimes, but will lack the detailed and instantaneous information offered by a regular crime detection service as rendered by the short wave systems in force and Michigan and Illinois.

VICTIMS IN GANGDOM'S LATEST MURDEROUS ASSAULT

DETROIT RADIO CHECKS CRIME

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 24—Crime waves in Detroit are combated successfully with radio waves sent out by station WCK, the "Voice of the Law." The city airs its troubles through the pioneer police broadcasting station of the world and the program varies from petty larceny to murder.

The long arm of the law is directed with unbelievable speed and efficiency by the "Voice of the Law" and apropos thereto let the kidnaping of Matthew Holdrieth, 24, son of a wealthy citizen, be cited.

An underworld gang seized Holdrieth and held him for ransom. A telephoned threat to the young man's father brought the latter to a designated street corner with $4,250 as the first down payment on the $225,000 extortion money demanded.

But the gang made an error. They robbed a taxi driver of his cab to make their getaway. The driver called police. The "Voice of the Law" spoke over station WCK, and listening patrolmen in scout cars searched the streets for the missing cab.

A few minutes later Patrolmen Hubert McGrath and Edward Fitzgerald sighted the stolen taxi and started in pursuit in their radio equipped auto. The gun battle that followed resulted in the capture of two of the gang, confession of the kidnaping and the release of Holdrieth, who was chained to a cot in an underworld apartment.

It is not only in the apprehension of criminals that the police radio has proved its worth. It is invaluable in the prevention of crime.

A person of suspicious appearance is seen loitering in a certain vicinity. A householder reports to police by phone. Orders are broadcast over the air to the scout car in that vicinity. Less than two minutes later the man is picked up. In 60 per cent of the cases he has a record that justified his arrest.

A report comes in from Chicago that a certain mob is on its way to Detroit in an automobile bearing license number so and so. Scout cars pick up the broadcast from the police radio. The auto has barely penetrated the city limits before it is sighted and its occupants apprehended.

Police Radio Plea Brings Speedy Results

Unidentified for four hours after an auto collision in which 10 were injured, a woman and her daughter, unconscious at Cable Memorial Hospital, Ipswich, were identified within half an hour last night, after a radio message over the State police net found the one State trooper who knew their names and address.

They were Mrs. Harry E. Ray of Rockland and her nine-year-old daughter. State Trooper William Olson had sent them to the hospital in a commandeered auto.

The woman's husband, Dr. Harry E. Ray, and his son, Harry, Jr., were among the victims taken to the other hospital. They were badly hurt.

CRIME EXPOSE TO GO ON AIR

An "inside" discussion of Boston's gangland crimes will be heard for the first time on the radio tomorrow night when Edward G. Robinson, famous star of "Little Caesar," and the Masked Reporter of the Boston Evening American step to the microphone at station WBZ.

His splendid portrayals of gangster roles have placed Robinson in the forefront with the great character actors of the age. Criminologists the country over have heralded his performances as true characterizations of gang leaders in great cities in the East and West.

The purpose of this novel broadcast—the first of its kind—is to acquaint listeners with the problem which faces the police and law-abiding citizens of the community.

Gangsters and their powerful backers are an ever increasing menace to the safety of every innocent man, woman and child on public highways.

The "inside" workings of these deadly enemies of society will be revealed in detail by the Masked Reporter in his discussion with Mr. Robinson.

The Masked Reporter will give you the "low-down" on recent outbreaks in the underworld that have presaged open warfare between organized gangs.

The broadcast—of 15 minutes' duration—will begin at 9:30 p. m. Tuesday at Station WBZ.

No matter how hard you look you won't find anything that little Patty would like more than this perfectly enchanting doll and trunk with two dresses, two hats, a coat, pajamas, undies and socks—all for $1.95. If you want to make an impression on your week-end hostess—take one of these cunning outfits to her little girl—You'll find them in Filene's Toy Shop! I've sketched the whole outfit for you. Can't you imagine how excited you would have been and how thankful—if one of mother's friends brought you a delightful gift like this? It's the kind of gift destined to thrill a girl child's very soul. And believe me, Anne, electric stoves and all the interesting new toys may come and go—but a girl child's dearest possession is still her "baby" doll. The doll is fifteen inches tall, jointed, closes her eyes to sleep! Don't think I've forgotten that little boys like toys too:—I found the most exciting new toy gliders with at least fifty feet altitude record—I have an idea the adults will take an interest in these too—at least the males! These gliders take off folded up—wings spread in air, then glider loops to a perfect landing. And just listen to this—the wings fold up—not break—when they come in contact with trees or a building because there are springs in wings and nose, that "give to the touch." These are exclusive to Filene's in Boston and they are only $1! Filene's Toy Shop, Franklin and Hawley street building. Mail and phone orders filled—call Hubbard 4250.

For "Housekeeping Nerves"

When I called to see Ruth the other day, she was rushing around madly trying to do half a dozen things at the same time. "Priscilla, I must have housekeeping nerves," she exclaimed. "Between planning and preparing the meals, tending to the children's hundred and one needs, and keeping the house in order I'm just plain frazzled." I told her about the splendid results you had from Cheney's Nerve Phosphates, how it relieved your insomnia and depressed spells, and pepped you up for the daily strain you had at the office. She vowed she'd get some immediately, and I'm so fond of her I hope she starts her nerve cure right away. Cheney's Nerve Phosphates contain, besides other valuable phosphates, Lecithin, the peculiar native phosphorous bearing constituent of brain and nerve substance. For all forms of nervousness, nerve weakness, insomnia or nerve prostration it has no equal. $1.00 Pint Bottle, by mail $1.10. G. S. CHENEY CO., Herb Specialists, 15 Union St., Boston, Mass.

Don't You Get

a thrill to think that Fashion says we can be thoroughly feminine again? And this is especially true of the dainty, intimate silken things that will be worn under the new frocks. This fall marks the return of those lovely, lacey wisps of mystery that I've always loved to wear. Today I saw at C. F. Hovey Co. for $1.69 the most tempting dance sets, gowns, chemises, and costume slips I've found in many moons. They're pure dye silk, the kind I've always paid $2 or more for. The slips have deep, shadow-proof hems, the chemises are truly fitted . . . and the dance sets, gowns and step-ins are just frothy with lace. I couldn't resist buying 3 pieces to match. I'm sure when you see them, you'll succumb as I did. You will find them on the Second Floor at C. F. Hovey Co.

I Know You Will Agree with me, Anne dear, when you have visited the stores that the new Fall fashions are the most fascinating and the most interesting of many a season. Another thing I discovered, which pleases my economical soul, is that the most practical clothes are the smartest. Designers have picked such comfortable and lovely materials—such as the new sheer woolens, travel prints, and tweeds, that the new ensembles are sure to be as inviting to the pocket book as to the eye. August is the time of Fur Sales, Clearance Sales and specials in beauty parlors, too. Let's meet and have a grand shopping orgy, right away, Anne, because there's nothing so good for the morale. It's shopping that has to be done, so let's do it now! More news next week.

Devotedly,

Priscilla

DR. VAN ALLEN MOURNED BY HUNDREDS

Hundreds of friends on two continents today mourned the passing of the Rev. William Harman Van Allen, S. T. D., rector of the Church of the Advent on Brimmer st. for more than a quarter of a century, traveler, author, poet and lecturer, who died yesterday in Munich, Germany.

The end came in the Schwabinger Hospital where Dr. Van Allen has been under treatment for illness that resulted from an injury received during one of his annual pilgrimages to Europe. The immediate cause of death was believed to be a stroke which paralyzed part of his body. He was 61 years old.

Dr. Van Allen went to the Church of the Advent in 1902 and remained as rector until March, 1929, when ill health forced him to quit.

He was born in Cameron, N. Y., the only child of Prof. and Mrs. Daniel D. Van Allen.

In 1894 he was ordained and became private secretary to Bishop Huntington with charge of St. Luke's and St. Anna's Chapel at Syracuse, N. Y. For a year he served as rector of the Church of the Epiphany in Trumansburg, N. Y., and then took the pulpit of Grace Church in Elmira, N. Y. From thta church he came to the Church of the Advent.

3 DIE IN NEW CUBAN FIGHT

Havana, Aug. 24 (AP)—Fresh outbreaks in the Province of Oriente, Cuba, caused the government today to hurry additional troops there in the belief that rebels concentrated at a number of strategic points might make a surprise maneuver.

Three insurgents were killed and a number wounded and taken prisoner when one of the insurgent groups was surprised. A considerable number of arms, a quantity of ammunition and other war material were seized. Three bombs exploded in Havana, but the damage was slight.

The government had issued a statement declaring its confidence in an immediate and successful termination of the uprising a few hours before the skirmishing was resumed.

All insurgent leaders of importance, with the exception of Gomez, are in prison.

Every American knows Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney. How many ever heard of Doctor Pauling, the 30-year-old American chemist, who has won the Langmuir prize?

Only 12 men understand the Einstein discovery. Einstein himself does not thoroughly understand Doctor Pauling's discovery—"The nature of chemical bonds that fasten the elements together" and rule the small universe called the molecule. It was to much for Doctor Einstein, when Pauling explained it.

"I shall have to brush up," said Einstein.

But he admitted that he didn't know. One of the surest indications of greatness.

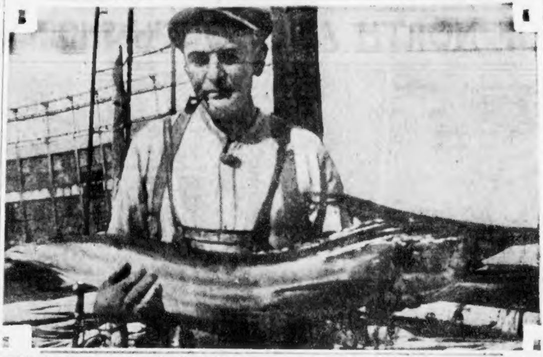
WHAT A CATCH THIS FISHERMAN MADE!



This strange type of fish, finally identified as the spear fish, and also known as a Marlin sword fish, because of the shape of the spear resembling very much the marlen spike, was caught by Rufus Comisky, who is shown with it, with a hand line trawl. Comisky is a member of the crew of the trawler Eleanor Nickerson. (Staff photo.)

ODD SPEAR FISH TRAWL TOLL

A peculiar type of fish finally identified as a spear fish, also known as a Marlin swordfish, was landed at Fish Pier today by the trawler Eleanor Nickerson.

It was caught Aug. 18 with a hand line trawl by Rufus Comisky, one of the crew. The fish is five feet long, yet weighs only 20 pounds, and has a 14-inch spear extended from its snoot.

Because none of the workers at the Pier could identify his peculiar catch, Comisky took it to the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, where it was labeled. It is called a Marlin swordfish because of the striking resemblance of its spear to a marlin spike.

Judge's Missing Son Hunted in Norwalk

Norwalk, Ct., Aug. 24 (AP)—Police and private detectives today combed this city for Edgar F. Hazelton, Jr., son of a former Brooklyn (N. Y.) municipal court justice, who has been reported missing since last Thursday. A speed boat, in which the 16-year-old youth came to this city, is still tied up here.

Judge Hazelton notified police today that his son had been seen on one of the main streets of Norwalk last night.

INDIAN HELD IN CHUM'S DEATH

Houlton, Me., Aug. 24 (AP)—Frank Joseph, 30, an Indian of Smyrna Mills, was held without bail today on a charge of murder in the death of Joseph Burnard, 47, another Indian.

Joseph said the two had engaged in a fist fight near Sheridan, 50 miles from Houlton, Saturday night after they had a few drinks.

In the fight Burnard was knocked unconscious and an examination later revealed he died of a fractured vertabra.

Joseph loaded his companion into their automobile and took him home. When he discovered the man was dead he notified authorities and surrendered.

A charge of manslaughter was changed to the more serious charge on arraignment this morning. He was held without bail to the November term of the grand jury.

BON JOUR! TOP O' THE MORNIN'! HELLO! WHAT a long journey it is from the knees of the Gods down to brass tacks.

WE HAVE JUST RETURNED FROM ONE OF THOSE triangle cruises—Bermuda, Halifax and New York, vagabonding with the S. S. Paris as the ark of joy. What triangles and what vagabonds! The tired married man (of whom there were more than 300 aboard) had the most divine and exciting time completing his own particular triangular problem with a dizzy blonde or dainty brunette as the third dimension, and while we will mention no names and tell no tales we will heartily recommend a Triangle Cruise for the depressed as being more fun than leaping from a 20-story window.

Gay Celebration at Sailing Time

NEW YORK WAS OUR PORT OF EMBARKATION—located now in the torrid zone—and we shoved off amid an avalanche of vari-colored balloons, gay bunting, with pennants flying, whistles screaming, horns tooting and—can you believe it—corks popping. The French are like that—the little extra holiday spirit. The crowds left behind on the pier were like a Follies chorus shouting "Good-bye, Baby," "Drink One on Me," "Forget You're Married," "See You in the Funny Papers," until we felt that perhaps WE HAD made a mistake in not permitting a certain gallant English Officer to see us off, thereby getting a "Cheerio" to remember. We recollected just in time that there might possibly be some handsome and debonair French Officers lurking about—and there were—so we dried our tears before they fell.

CAN YOU IMAGINE BEING the only Boston lady afloat among a half a thousand platinum blondes from Brooklyn, including a number of dainty debs from Philadelphia, a few decorous dames from Omaha, Nebraska, and amazing Amazons from everywhere. What wimmin! It was quite amusing to watch them metamorphose Paris into Gay Paree, and after the third day out we confess we contributed our small share of the mirth.

Waiting Game

HAVE YOU NEVER TAKEN one of those rest cruises? My! My! Then we had better explain the usual routine and a few simple rules. Never speak to anyone but the purser and the stewards on the first day out if you don't speak French or if you do you probably will be misunderstood. The Best People have a little game called "Patience" which is nothing more than sitting in your deck chair, peering critically over the top of your Book of The Month and making mental reservations. As soon as a passenger appears along the promenade, take out your social yardstick and start measuring. The result will be something like this: how uninteresting—awful cravat—too well-fed—bleached - provincial — terrible person, and you will sit back to wait for the tall, distingue gentleman who you feel sure is on the boat somewhere, or the charming, mysterious lady who always travels on ships. You wait quite a while.

JUST TO PROVE OUR POINT, feeling a little restless toward the end of the first day that the tall, distingue one hadn't come along, we had a mental picture of an early bedtime story which somehow we hadn't figured on. Democratic, that is what we would be and put the social yardstick down for the moment. A member of the sillier sex appeared strolling leisurely toward us, so we ventured a slight, ever so slight nod of greeting. No one could blame us—it was getting along toward dinner—Vincent Lopez' St. Regis Sexonians were waiting and a dance would be a welcome relief after the cramped quarters of our deck chair all day. Furthermore, we started measuring unconsciously—Brooks Brothers suit—haberdashery not too bad in the fading twilight and naturally he looked as though he could dance—and how we DID want to dance. He returned our timid salutation by leaning over our chair familiarly, saying "Say, lady, are you travelling alone? If so, that makes two of us. What'll you have to drink? I don't mind payin' the bills providin' . . ." We never did hear the end of that sentence because we were already out of our chair hissing "Bulgarian" as we shot away. Funnily enough, he must have thought we said "vegetarian" because he asked us to dance a few evenings later.

WE WILL ADMIT IT TAKES patience to measure all points of the compass by a Boston yardstick and we finally packed it away and found that we really liked that shoe and slipper man from Brockton who, in spite of being a bit rotund, was a divine dancer, and the peroxided lady in the cabin adjacent to ours was a good sport and sweet enough to loan us a blonde hairnet one breezy evening on deck when we sat out to wish on shooting stars. What stars—what wishes!

Comfort First

AND IT WAS HOT! PASSIONATE Hibiscus, but it was hot in Bermuda and all points north. If there is one thing that vanishes in the heat it is that cool thing called dignity. How we envied the daring ones who stayed in the pools all day in their backless swim suits and on deck between times in bizarre pajamas. What a fashion parade—Like Coney Island or the Champs Elysee. Nauti-pants of every description and some quite indescribable—beach costumes of chiffon and Chantilly, original ornate and awful. But cool. Think that over when you ooze in crepe de chine and stockings—as we did.

IN SPITE OF THE MELTING process, we gained in avoirdupois because the menu was just the most excellent we have ever tasted—five meals a day of the most delicious viands prepared by a perfect chef de cuisine. And the wines and liquers! We gazed upon the wine when it was red, white and green and if we have a regret it is only that the Paris is not tied up to the end of Rowes Wharf right now.

THERE WERE ALL KINDS of games for the active and a Montemartre with a crooning colored orchestra for the initiate. After a few days, it was just one big family party and every day we met more and more delightful people—a handsome Irishman named Percival Murphy—(never give your real name on a cruise)—whom we nicknamed Purse for short because he was so delightfully generous. And we never did see Halifax because we were fog-bound and who cared anyhow. So we sailed back into the sunshine. By this time the Philly debs were having a marvelous time—their scruples having melted in the extreme heat and we were just breezing along with the breeze singing that, Drink and Be Very, Very Merry for tomorrow we will still be alive and the New York skyline is getting closer every minute.

AND THERE MUST BE AN extra something about these cruises because we have heard since we returned that the A. Felix DuPonts of Philadelphia and the Gold Coast, Cape Cod, invited forty guests to go for a week-end cruise on the Mauretania to Nova Scotia and who cares, and when we think of the champagne, dancing and decking parties they are going to have we can understand that even airplanes, motors and private yachts leave something to be desired even by the multi-millionaires. Maybe it's Romance.

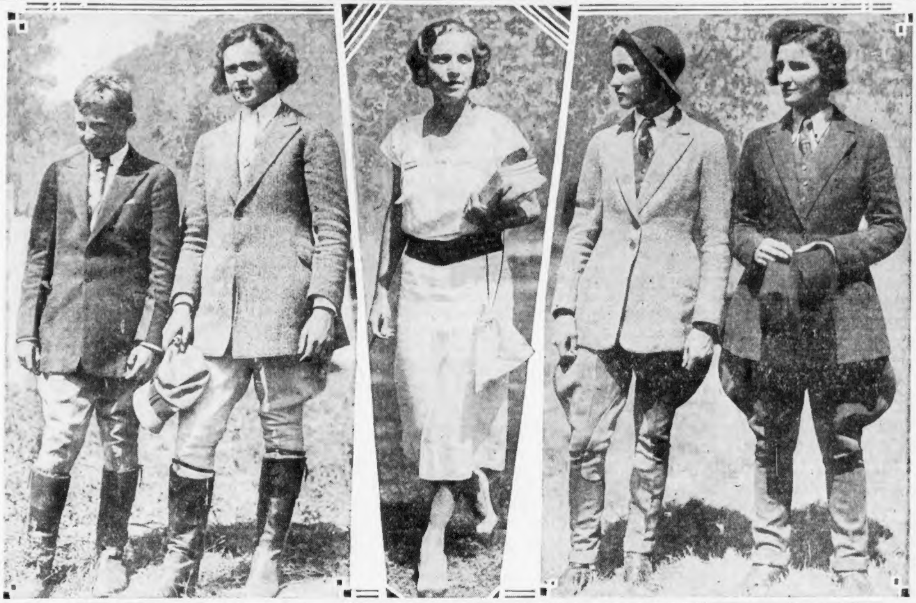
JUNIOR YACHTSMEN OF NORTH AND SOUTH SHORES TO RACE



F. HAROLD TOLMAN MISS TOLMAN MRS. REVERE MISS MARY FULLER MISS LYDIA FULLER

THE TOLMAN children, F. Harold, Jr., and Miss Virginia, had their usual success in acquiring blues at the Cohasset Horse Show. Mrs. Paul Revere of Boston, was snapped as she was busy with her duties as usher and program seller. The Misses Lydia and Mary Fuller, daughters of ex-Gov. and Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, entertained friends from Rye, where they have their summer home, at their box at the show.

Manchester to Be Scene of Regatta

Now that the races for larger boats sailed by older skippers are over at Marblehead, the Juniors are to have a regatta at Manchester. This is an annual invitation affair, much looked forward to by the younger set, and will include entries from several North and South Shore yacht clubs, among them being the Eastern, Sandy Bay, Dory, Eastern Point (Gloucester), Pleon, Manchester, and Annisquam Yacht Clubs. The races are slated for Wednesday and Thursday of this week, and the competition is expected to run high, judging from the excitement shown by the boys and girls last week in a similar event. A cup, the first prize, and a medal, the second, will be awarded to the winners by Mrs. William Hooper.

Flower Show

Topsfield is the next North Shore colony to hold a flower show. This will take place during the annual Topsfield Fair, as one of the features. Mrs. Gordon W. Means is in charge of the garden exhibits, assisted by members of various clubs, who will arrange sets from their clubs, as Mrs. Albert C. Burrage is doing for Ipswich, and Mrs. Harlan P. Kelsey for Salem. Mrs. Ellery Sedgwick, of Beverly, will arrange North Shore Garden Club exhibit, while several ladies who are helping Mrs. Means will have their own personal sets, as are Mrs. William C. Endicott, of Danvers, and Mrs. John H. Lancashire, of Manchester. Also working for the success of the show is Mrs. Edward Wigglesworth, who is chairman.

Play Season Wanes

The Surrey Players, those exceedingly successful young actors and actresses who have had such an outstanding season, will continue until the end of this month, when they will shut up shop to wend their devious ways till another season turns. Miss Sylvia Weld, who has been with the players several summers now, will join her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Weld, of Brookline, on the North Shore, where they plan to spend the remainder of the summer. Miss Weld, whose engagement to Mr. Albert Bigelow, son of the Albert F. Bigelow's of Brookline, was announced in the spring, has not yet made her wedding plans, but will probably decide on the date when she arrives at home, for even the importance of a pending marriage is subordinated where the work of play-production is concerned. Miss Weld is a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club, where her talent was first exhibited, and made her debut in the 1927 season.

Benefit Party for St. Vincent Home

The annual summer bridge and whist party of St. Vincent's Orphan Guild will be held tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Francis L. Trainor, 92 Sea ave., Quincy.

Mrs. Stephen Courtney and Mrs. Trainor have charge of reservations. Mrs. Martin H. Fannon, guild president, has personally supervised the affair.

Jaunty Suits for Autumn

By ANN ARDEN

PREPARE FOR a suit season. Does that thrill you? Well, the new suits are so jaunty and swagger, it would seem that few women could resist their appeal, they fit in with modern needs, and certainly many women never look quite so well in anything else.

* * *

INTERESTING detail, fabric and color contrast merit more than passing interest in the model pictured. A three-piece suit in Diagra wool, toned billiard green, the skirt has inverted pleats each side front and back panel. The hip length jacket is indented at waistline, with button cuff detail repeating the three-button center front closing. The belt and buckle are of the material, and two slant pockets each side front are fringed.

THE BLOUSE is of imported loosely woven novelty tweed in brown and gold—it is double breasted, fastened with gilt buttons and belted in the green. Its short sleeves, and fronts folding to revers, are outlined in fringe of the green wool. A scarf of the blouse material tops the coat, has the green fringe edging and folds ascot fashion.

THE PERKY hat worn decidedly on one side is of black handkerchief felt, with two quills, one red, one green, following its curved outline, meeting in point over right eye, and seemingly anchored by green ribbon bow at back.

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser or to Station WAAB.

YOUNG MEN MUST BE MODERN

FLOWERS, letters and telegrams are still good for conveying sentiment. But young men who would be modern do not stop there . . they telephone. There is something direct . . appealing . . personal . . about a telephone message. It puts one ahead of others who didn't think to call, and gets immediate undivided attention. Many a roadster has idled at the curb, many a visitor has cooled his heels alone while some wise rival was using his three minutes on the telephone to the best possible advantage.

You call her when she is in town. Why stop when she leaves? Daytimes, you can call 25 miles for twenty-five cents . . 64 miles for fifty cents . . 174 miles for a dollar. CRIME COMMISSION AND CRITIC IN FUNK

—By Gilbert Seldes—

IT IS NEVER PLEASANT to see a strong man throw in the sponge. When Jess Willard's seconds abandoned the fight for him, the towel caught Dempsey in the face, as he was coming out of his corner, and he was bewildered; but more bewildered were the experts who remarked, coldly, that the world's heavyweight championship had never before been surrendered in this way. At a crisis, we expect people to fight until they are knocked out. As a French general said during the war, when he was ordered to take a rest for his health, "soldiers have the right to die, but not o be sick."

GILBERT SELDES

It will seem to a great many people that the Vickersham commission on crime has abdicated, little contemptibly. The confession of failure s frank enough; none of the shiftiness of the report on prohibition is apparent; but an avowed nability to analyze the causes of crime and to uggest remedies is disheartening. If the members of the commission, after all their work, canot do these things, who can?

The answer seems to be that Judge Anderson an. His minority report is full of general terms, ven of abstractions, but he is not afraid to tackle is subject. And another instance of surrender n the face of the enemy is to be found in the reception of his analysis. An editorial writer calls hopeless and fantastic, because Judge Anderson ays "there should be a thorough and courageous e-examination of the principles and structure of ur social, political, legal and economic systems."

niversal Doubt

This is, of course, not all of his report; he ishes individuals to be watched, helped, and corected if they are unbalanced; he wants slums bolished and the nurseries of crime destroyed. ut he is willing, in the face of danger, to examine verything, to reject evil, and to hold fast to that hich is good. For this he is called visionary.

It happens that just this sort of examination s actually going on, in a haphazard and halfearted way. The war and its consequences have orced every thinking man to ask himself whether he system which creates wars and allows panic epressions is necessarily the best system. Not ne institution of those we accepted and revered 0 years ago has escaped this critical scrutiny, ven if we have been unconscious of it.

If people do not go to church, it is not because he motor car and the golf links are more attractive; it is because in some way the church has ailed them; if they stop patronizing fortune-ellers, it is because fortune-tellers tell lies; if hey refuse to vote, it is because political parties ave betrayed them. Wall Street and farming nd college education and newspapers and patent edicines and the Red Cross are subject to the ame scepticism; so are sport and the judiciary. ven bootleggers are no longer immune.

ore Than Debunking

The process has been going on for more than n years, becoming definite in its purpose as aterial conditions grew worse. We called it debunking at first, and debunking grew tiresome ecause it had no objective; it was too much of sneer, too little of a creative work. Judge Anerson does not suggest that we smash churches; e asks us to anticipate and eliminate the conitions which cause people to smash churches; ke Dr. John Dewey's committee, he is not so uch afraid of a Communist as of the poverty nd cruelty which make Communists.

I should dislike an Institute of Human Research, which Judge Anderson seems to think ught to be created by the Government; someing in the name sounds like the uplift and soial workers. But any one could name two ozen men and women who might be persuaded come together and to think together about the roblems of human relationships in America. hey would be, unfortunately, another commision; they would have to make a report, and we re growing leery of reports.

One danger line I can see. I wonder if the pponents of Judge Anderson have it in the back f their minds. An Institute of Human Research xisted once—and it had a great deal to do with e French Revolution. The form it took seems trange to us; it published an encyclopedia. For 1 years this great critical work appeared, analyzing the bases of society, the mind of the rench world—and before another 20 years had assed, the society of France and the French ind had completely changed. It was a factinding agency with strong political and moral rejudices; it was directed by philosophers who new their objective. And it was enormously uccessful.

Perhaps a little fear of a similar outcome xists today. To examine our social and ecoomic system may prove embarrassing. But the eople who fancy that revolution must be the reult of the questioning spirit are a little disloyal o their own standards and, what is more, they how a great ignorance of revolutions. If capalism and the Republican party and the D. A. R. nd the Anti-Saloon League are good and powerul, no examination of their books can disturb hem; if they are not, they had better go. Unnourned.

In the Old Lane

he wistful wind sighs through the willow trees,
Dreaming of hours when long-gone sweethearts kept Tryst 'neath their branches, as the twilight crept cross the rosy petalled peonies hat edge old fragrant gardens' boundaries,
And crinolines swept softly down the lane,
As dames, no mortal eyes may see again,

learkened to Love's sweet importunities.
Vhere do they wander now? Ah, well, who knows?
But when the ancient lane is sweet with June
They, unseen, pause to hear the linnet's tune nd breathe once more the fragrance of the rose,
And, noiseless as the thistledown's light wing,
Drift through the willow boughs—remembering.

Politeness

—By Bruno Lessing—

PARIS—When two French laborers bump into each other in a crowd each hastens to say, "I beg your pardon." When two sturdy New York longshoremen bump into each other each says, "why in blankety blank don'tcha look where you're going?"

Politeness in casual intercourse is bred in French nature. It is not acquired or taught as it is with us. It's in the blood. Here are two illustrations that I vouch for:

A man went into a tailor shop and it was easy to see that he was in a rage. But he took his hat off and bowed to the tailor, who bowed in return.

"That suit you sent me is rotten," he said. "You failed to carry out every one of my instructions."

"That is no way to talk," said the tailor, pointing to me. "Here is one of my customers." The man bowed to me and said, "I'm sorry." Then he turned to the tailor.

"Nevertheless," he said "it is a rotten suit and I shall never deal with you again."

"I'm sorry," said the tailor, with a bow. The man bowed to the tailor and to me and said, "Good day!" The tailor bowed and said, "I thank you. Good day." I happened to see a reflection of myself in a mirror. So I bowed, too.

I tried to get a telephone number. The service has been greatly improved in France. It's now where it was in America about two years after Bell invented the telephone. The manager of the restaurant came to my assistance and tried to get the number.

"Mademoiselle," he said to the operator, "this delay is formidable. I insist upon getting this number immediately or I shall make a complaint to the Bureau." I did not hear the reply.

"That is no excuse," he went on. "You are very stupid and I insist on you getting the number and calling on this telephone within five minutes. Thank you very much. Good afternoon!"

Of course this "thank you" and "good afternoon" business doesn't get you anywhere. But the French just can't help it. It is even said that the executioner who runs the guillotine murmurs, "I'm sorry," to his victim at the last moment. In which case, you may be sure, the victim replies, "Pray, do not mention it."

Like the Italians and Spanish, the French are great on shaking hands. If papa and mama and their five children happen to meet another papa and mama with five children, whom they know, each one shakes hands with all the others and says "Good day." In parting—even if they have paused only long enough to make a few remarks on the weather—they go through the business again and say, "Au revoir." I figure out 98 handshakes and 98 salutations in such an encounter, although I am not hot on mathematics.

Summer Indians

Long years ago the Redskin bold
Possessed Manhattan's strand,
And as the scroll of time unrolled
The Paleface ruled the land.

But if the Redskin walked once more
Beside the ocean's foam
The scenery along the shore
Would make him feel at home.

For every man the eye might scan
Reveals a sunkist brow.
The Paleface wears a coat of tan—
He is a Redskin now.

'A World Can End'

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

BOOKS ABOUT RUSSIA continue to pour from the printing presses. They are falling now like a Niagara of words, and the Five-Year Plan is discussed at dinner tables, and Bernard Shaw and Lady Astor have been visiting the Soviet, to the disgust of Winston Churchill, who has excoriated them in no uncertain terms.

The Grand Duchess Marie gave us a thrilling volume last year, writing, of course, from the point of view of one who had known the old Russia under the Czar; and now another lady of title, Irina Skariatina, formerly Countess Irina Wladimirovna Keller (now Mrs. Victor F. Blakeslee), comes forward with "A World Can End," which Jonathan Cape & Harrison Smith publish.

She kept a diary all through the revolution, and, accomplished linguist that she is, like most of the aristocrats of her race, she translates it herself into vivid, flowing English; and it takes on the value that such a historical document must have for those of us who are avid of news of those perilous and crowded days of doom and despair.

The earlier portions of her volume deal with her quiet life on the country estate of her ancestors, Troitskoe. Surrounded by every luxury and having been used to vast wealth from the instant she was born, the record is in striking contrast to the years of havoc which followed after the Soviet gained control and she was fortunate enough to escape to England.

Falls in Love

Her life ran by, in her girlhood, as though it were all a dream. An English governess taught her our language. She was a studious child, who loved astronomy; and often she would occupy her one hour of leisure during the day by dipping into all the books she could find on the subject; and at night she would wander out under the stars, or look through the great telescope which they had at the palace. She even ventured to write once to the great Camille Flammarion, and received a letter from him, in which he told her just what authorities to consult in her studies.

Then came the day when, but 16, she fell in love with a boy who was visiting at her house; and she tells with great feeling of their wistful meeting—the shy wonder of them both at the first awakening of love and romance. But their story was brief. They were destined to be separated, and she never saw him alone but once; yet the memory of that initial and virginal love remained always.

Like all those born to the purple, she was forced into a marriage devoid of real love. She bore Count Keller two children, a boy and a girl; but after four years she divorced her husband. Her boy had died, and she began to see life in terms of tragedy and distress. She took up nursing, and when the first rumbles of the revolution were heard, she saw the import of it all, and tells of those portentous days in a series of sharply etched pictures which bring them mightily before us.

40 Years in Hell

At the Marie Theater one night she saw the great figures which had been released from Siberia. They were seated in the imperial box in the center of the horseshoe. Vera Figner, Vera Zasoulitch, Morozov. And she says:

"I couldn't help staring at them, and wondering how it felt to be suddenly free after years of imprisonment. Were they happy, now that their dreams of a new, emancipated Russia had come true, and they realized that they had not suffered in vain—or had they been tortured so long that it was impossible for them to be happy any more? Some one told me that one of them (Lopatin, I think, though I am not sure) had even forgotten how to speak, after being 40 years in solitary confinement."

The last paragraph of her book is full of emotion. It will bring a choking sensation to your throat. But the whole account rings true, and one gets a sense of a new terror in the world and is glad that a few Russians have escaped to share our freedom with us.

My Friend the World

My friend the world for comradeship
Shares with me what she has to spend
Of beauty, pleasure, happiness,
Color and contrast, without end.

And sorrow, too, she bids me share,
And failure, poverty and pain,
Lest I should grow too blind to see
That some must lose for others' gain.

Yet, though sometimes my heart is sad
With things I crave no knowledge of,
Each day I thank my friend the world
For giving me so much to love!

Inspector King, chief of the Nassau County detective bureau, said the boy's family was negotiating with the kidnapers to pay a part of the sum at once and the balance when he returned safely.

Mrs. Rosenthal, who is a wealthy widow, was on the verge of a nervous collapse, servants at her home said today.

The young man recently became a partner in the firm of curb exchange vrokers headed by Henry L. Bogatin, his brother-in-law.

Mayor Walker proved himself exceedingly popular with the gay residents of Budapest. He danced with society beauties and frequented the New York bar, a favorite haunt of American tourists, eschewing champagne and contenting himself with less fancy drinks.

During his stay here he placed a wreath on the monument erected to the memory of George Washington.

Ed Don George, the wrestler, is mad. Ed is in Ann Arbor, Michigan, being treated for a bad case of granulated eyelids. But when he gets better he's going to see his lawyer and start raising a rumpus.

He's going to sue the Boston Post, he says. It seems that Vic, who draws the Joe Jinks cartoon in that sheet, has created a wrestling character named Pete Humus and in a recent cartoon Vic had his pachyderm wrestle AND DEFEAT an opponent named Don George. And did Ed Don George burn up!

He says that the cartoon is a gross libel; that he can take this guy Humus any day in the week and that his reputation has been injured irreparably by Vic's cartoon.

So, there you are—even wrestlers can grow a prima donna complex and throw a fit of temperament.

WEALTHY HAVE SORE THROATS

Marion, Aug. 24—A mild epidemic of septic sore throat has broken out in this town, summer home of Walter S. Gifford, new director of President Hoover's unemployment relief board, the Cudahys and Armours of Chicago and other wealthy families, it was revealed today.

Drs. W. W. Knowlton and Martin A. O'Brien of the State Department of Public Health have directed the pasteurization of all milk coming into town.

Although only two cases have been officially reported to Charles H. Chadwick, Jr., chairman of the Marion board of health, he stated he knew of many others, the figures ranging from 21 to 40.

While State officials said the situation is not alarming, it is known that many of the wealthy summer residents are disturbed, as the epidemic has been impartial in its attacks.

Other cases reported are one each in Fall River and New Bedford. State physicians said the epidemic was not caused by drinking water or bathing.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

"Of the 35 cities that have shown construction contracts in excess of $5,000,000 during the first seven months of 1931, eight reported go-aheads over the same seven-month period of 1930. These were Boston, Yonkers, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Washington, Houston and San Francisco.

Authorities there communicated with Coast Guard headquarters in Washington and several boats were sent from Norfolk to comb the southern end of the bay.

Coast Guardsmen also searched the southern end of the bay for the Chum, a 38-foot cabin cruiser, which put out yesterday from Tangier sound on a fishing expedition and was reported missing.

THE LOVES OF CHARLIE CHAPLIN

King of Laughs and World's Unluckiest Lover

(Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American)

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

(Charlie was "through with love" when Pola and he dissolved their engagement. But love came to him again when attractive young Lita Grey made her appearance at his studio. Charlie just couldn't say "no" to love.)

CHAPTER 19

"You promised me when I was a litle girl that when I grew up I could be your leading woman."

A flush of color mounted to Lita Grey's cheeks as sweetly she reminded the great king of fun.

Chaplin looked at her and smiled. He did remember her in the films. He remembered her as a "kid" with short dresses and curls down her neck.

"Did I promise that?" he replied. "Well, I may make it good. Go in and have some screen tests made."

Lita Grey grown into womanhood—Charlie couldn't believe it.

In her face he saw expressed the calm of her Spanish heritage, that suggested dreamy, sunlit days of unhurried beauty and a vitality that quivers beneath her tranquility.

CONTRACT SIGNED

It was a new something he viewed in Lita Grey.

Charlie eagerly awaited her screen test. He could think of nothing but the screen tests and when the report returned favorably, he was elated. He could make this "mystery girl of Hollywood" as she came later to be known, as his leading lady—the only other one since Edna Purviance.

Strange that the two women had met before—the only two who have so influenced his life. But then, fate is strange and alluring.

A contract was drawn and signed and Lita went to work for Chaplin.

Her history—she was only a child—was backgrounded by an intriguing heritage. She was a native daughter of California. Her lineal ancestry dated back to Antonio Navarro, a Spanish pioneer who settled in California when the state was an outpost of Spanish rule.

This child of the picturesque Dons was born in the Cahuenga valley in the very shadow of where once stood the chapel of Cahuenga. Lita attended the Hollywood schools, had taken a course of training in dancing and dramatic art and was now ready to become a screen actress.

She had pursued a cloistered existence so different from the high-nerved whirl of other girls her age. She was convent trained and was gentle and adept at feminine arts.

Lolitia—for that was her right name—knew little of the outside world, the world of artificiality, night clubs and bon vivante. She played tennis—incidentally, a devotion of Charlie's.

Charlie first saw Lita when she was 14 with immature figure, but a child with glowing eyes.

KNEW LITTLE OF LIFE

That she was now grown to womanhood "held" Charlie—lovely, graceful womanhood—Charlie adored the breathless expectation in her eyes when he spoke to her.

New vistas had opened up for her eager eyes to glimpse. Her talent was formative, but under Charlie's tutelage she hoped to emerge supreme.

When Charlie took Lita as his leading woman she knew less of life than did the average jazzy, effervescent flapper. No love affairs had ever brought a quick-beating to her heart or a flush to her cheeks.

Boys were just boys. Men just men.

She idolized Chaplin for his great artistry.

But it was that of a young girl for a much older man. There was no physical attraction, then.

She learned to swim, ride horseback, play tennis expertly, and Charlie crowed over her accomplishments.

And Lita continued to remain the "mystery girl of the films," little known to the public save for her occasional appearances on the screen.

Charlie treated her like an orchid.

He made her promise to retain her girlish modesty. He asked her to refrain from being seen in the crowds of the night life of the city or at the beaches. And Lita said yes.

During the months that followed Chaplin's association with Lita in their work at his studios, the film king saw much of his leading lady, but only at the studio or at her home. Never was he seen with her at the public places—he didn't want to. When he was seen at the Cocoanut Grove or when he danced at the Ambassador it was with someone else.

When he dined at the Alexandri or at an inn along the beach, another screen star grasped his arm. It was part of the promise, not to have Lita Grey introduced to life in the night world.

But Charlie was at all times appreciative of Lita's difference from his other women.

CHARLIE FALLS AGAIN

He was in love with Lita, he began to feel, in love with her gentle, quiet, utter lack of awe at anything.

She had none of the exquisite radiance of Claire Windsor. She had not the sex appeal of Peggy Hopkins Joyce. She did not possess the volcanic emotions of Pola Negri. She was just an attractive daughter of the Spanish Dons, with langourous brown eyes, a seductively soft voice and a charming acquiescence to do his bidding.

But something about her thrilled Chaplin, a new and different kind of thrill that left him calm and happy.

And then Charlie confidentially confessed his secret yearning to make Lita his bride. He told a friend of his heart throbs when she was near.

"She is the most natural and the frankest girl I ever met," he said. "She's more like a boy some ways. She rides, swims, plays basketball and cricket. Throws cricket just like a boy. She doesn't have any of the feminine artifices, those smirks and smiles and none of the artificial sex lures. She loves the country—loves to be outdoors. And you know how I like the outdoors."

The friend smiled all-knowingly. Charlie had fallen again. Charlie's eyes glowed with interest as he talked of Lita's personality.

He was almost eloquent in his description of her charms.

He fairly raved about her.

"She loves flowers and gardens," he continued, a sentimental gleam in his soulful eyes. "She doesn't like crowds. And, would you believe it, she never has been in a gilded cafe in all her life. What a girl! She is the personification of frank comradeship. I am thoroughly tired of this thing called sex appeal and I think the world is, too."

And Charlie meant every word he said, his friend told me in New York, in relating incidents of Charlie's tragic-tinged love-life.

"But Lita is the boyish type of of modern girl, gentle, fearless, attractive. I think she's wonderful!" Charlie exclaimed.

And so, punctuating his true feelings for Lita Grey, Charlie turned his back on the young women who knew all the "feminine artifices," and married brown-eyed, soft-spoken Lita Grey.

"Charlie's love and subsequent marriage to Lita Grey will continue in tomorrow's American.

Film Folk Plan Big Hand for Gilbert Roland in Stage Play

Los Angeles, Aug. 24—Hollywood will turn out en masse to greet Jane Cowl when she opens at the Belasco Theater in "Camille," for isn't one of its own film players to be her Armand.

Louella O. Parsons

Ivan Kahn, Hollywood agent, late Saturday, signed Gilbert Roland for the same part on the stage he played in the silent version of "Camille."

Armand, opposite Norma Talmadge's Camille, is the best thing the young Mexican actor has ever done. He not only looked the part of Dumas' colorful character, but he played it with fine understanding.

Negotiations have been on with Gilbert Roland ever since I mentioned the fact two or more weeks ago. Gilbert wasn't sure he could learn the lines in the limited time, but he knows the play so well he realized if he worked day and night he could do justice to Armand. Naturally he is delighted to play in Jane Cowl's company.

An earnest movie fan told me in all seriousness the greatest thrill she got out of attending the Clark trial was seeing John Boles face to face. "He is grand, isn't he?" she said. The man who signed John Boles at $7000 per week in vaudeville probably knew that this young woman's opinion is shared by dozens of other females throughout the country. Mr. Boles' singing, I think, is better than his acting. His voice is easily, next to Lawrence Tibbett's, the best on the screen. Perhaps by the time he finishes his vaudeville tour musical comedies will once more be in vogue. He completes his contract with Universal by playing a role in "Frankenstein."

Elsie Janis

Elsie is so eager to get her manuscript to Dutton, her publishers, that she engaged a plane to take her to New York. The final pages will be written in the clouds. Can it be done? I know that it can, because I wrote a newspaper story 7000 feet in the air aboard a Fokker plane piloted by Lester Maitland and occupied by the distinguished Trubee Davidson. The Santa Fe station on Thursday night looked exactly like a motion picture convention. Al Jolson and his pretty wife Ruby were saying au revoir to Hollywood. German Talkie Comedy Hit

"The Private Secretary" at the Fine Arts, strikes a high comedy note. The new German talkie is one of the most charming, modern, and swiftly moving of talkie productions. Renate Mueller plays the leading feminine role and scores heavily. Felix Bressart supports her. He has a way of putting over comedy situations that carries the touch of a great artist. Gay melodies are injected into the photoplay, and they are ably sung by Miss Mueller and Herman Thimig.

'Met' Magazine

The "Met Close-Up," an eight-page magazine, edited, published and managed by the service staff of the Metropolitan Theater, has appeared. The new magazine has a mailing list of more than 5000, being sent to every theater in the Paramount-Publix organization. James Mohan is managing editor, and the other members of the staff include Roger Brady, editor-in-chief; Fred Weldon, associate editor; Hibbard Henderson, advertising manager, and Vincent Ziminsky and Louis Kenney.

Edward Robinson Proves Personally He Is Great Actor

By HARRIS MORGAN

When Edward G. Robinson steps out on the stage of the Keith-Boston this week, a score of gallant ghosts accompany him. There, somewhere in the shadows, are "Little Caesar," "Nick the Greek," and that irascible Tony of "They Knew What They Wanted." All these roles are inseparable from Mr. Robinson, even when he makes a personal appearance. He is an actor; they are his creations.

Edward G. Robinson

So when the audience at the Boston break into cheers this week, they are shouting not only for Mr. Robinson, a jolly mild mannered man in the flesh, but for all his fierce shadows of the films, gunmen, gamblers and the like. Mr. Robinson, on stage, depreciates the fact that he will probably be identified with Little Caesar all his life, amiably explains that prior to his entrance in that roaring play, "The Racket," he had always been known on stage as a bearded, meek and aged gentleman. Probably no star of the screen has ever had a more fortunate "personal appearance" than Mr. Robinson, for he is as easy and suave and amusing on the Boston stage as he ever was in a gangster film.

To say that Mr. Robinson makes a hit with the spectators is altogether too mild comment. On opening day, men, women and children had been standing in line for many minutes to see him, and when he finally did appear there was the most royal racket ever heard in a variety house. And the most admirable part of it all is that Mr. Robinson, as an actor, deserves every bit of the storm of applause that he receives. For once, every handclap, shriek and whistle is a well-won tribute.

Also at the Boston and on the screen this time is a mild little comedy entitled "The Runaround," which sets forth amusingly if none too realistically the adventures of a chorus girl who went forth to marry a millionaire. Mary Brian is in this affair, so is Geoffrey Kerr, so even is that veteran, Joseph Cawthorn.

Will Rogers Clicks

There is something positively uncanny about Will Rogers as a star of the photoplays. By all the rules of the game, he shouldn't be a good actor, but he is. And he demonstrates that fact again in "Young as You Feel," amusing little comedy at the Olympia and the Uptown.

With anyone else in the chief role, the whole picture would fall to pieces in an instant. For even if George Ade did toss it off, the plot is a limp little affair about a dyspeptic father who finally had his fling and outbid all the efforts of his two boisterous sons.

Again, for a foil to such dry wit as Will possesses, the producers have set the more brilliant presence of Fifi Dorsay, that young woman who boasts almost as good a French accent as M. Maurice Chevalier. Let Miss Dorsay woo the decrepit cattle merchant away from his beeves and his pills, and the fun begins. Together, she and Mr. Rogers toss off any comedy that comes their way. They are a most ill-assorted pair, but an almost matchless one for any movie.

BRIDE 'THROWN' TO HER DEATH AFTER PARTY

San Francisco, Aug. 24 (AP) Police today sought to learn whether Mrs. Daisy Price, bride of Lieut.-Comdr. George D. Price, U. S. N., who plunged four stories from an apartment to her death yesterday, fell accidentally or was pushed from a window. In a dying statement she said

"It was my fault," but to men who picked her pajama-clad body from the sidewalk she was reported to have gasped: "I was thrown out."

The fall occurred after a party in her apartment. As she fell she snatched a chair for support, but the gesture was futile. The chair was shattered on the sidewalk by her body.

Police found cuts on the back of Mrs. Price's legs, indicating, they said, she might have been pushed out backward

Lieut.-Comdr. Price is attached to the aircraft carrier Lexington.

ARREST BALKS HIS WEDDING

Arthur Johnson, 22, of 18 Milton st., Dorchester, who told police his arrest Saturday night interfered with his plans to get married, in Dorchester court today was held for larceny of an auto and compulsory insurance law violations.

His fiancee, Miss Margaret Reed, 19, of Prospect st., Cambridge, who was with Johnson at the time of his arrest, accompanied him to court

Arrested by Motor Cycle Officer Harold Hickey, when it was discovered the car was not properly insured, Johnson said he had purchased the machine last June. Police say the car is the property of a Newtonville man. The case was continued two weeks.

Miss Reed displayed a marriage license and Johnson said they planned to be wedded on Sunday. Today they revealed the ceremony had not taken place.

Lynch, part owner of Arlington Park race track, has been held by kidnapers since Thursday, his friends said, for $250,000 ransom

Marty Guilfoyle, gambler and handbook operator, an associate of Lynch, was reported to be raising $50,000 in hopes of effecting a compromise. The kidnapers, however, were quoted by the Herald and Examiner as saying they want $250,000 or "We'll fill Lynch full of lead."

Square this with what you hear

. what you read
. . . what you believe

NOWADAYS you read and hear every kind of thing about cigarettes. But when you try to square some of it with your own common-sense and experience, a lot of it just doesn't "square"!

What smokers want to know about a cigarette is, "How good is it?"

And when it comes to that, cigarettes are just as good and just as pure as the materials from which they're made.

In making Chesterfield, we use only riper, milder, sweeter-tasting tobaccos—the best that money can buy—and pure cigarette paper—the purest that can be made. Our chemists rigidly test for cleanliness and purity all materials used in the manufacture of Chesterfield. In our factories even the air is washed, and changed every 4½ minutes.

Everything that goes into Chesterfield is the best that money can buy or that science knows about.

"Good . . . they've got to be good," we say about CHESTERFIELD—and we mean it! And that's something you can square with everything you've ever read, or heard—or know—about this good cigarette!

RADIO HUNTS CRIMINALS

Local Station Volunteers Aid

By N. F. T.

With people in every sizable city of America discussing the wide and rampant swath of outlawry radio comes out from its heretofore limited field of entertainment, contributing facilities locally in the war on crime and criminals.

News reports today are overloaded with accounts of stories having to do with lawlessness of every description. Recognizing an urgent need for drastic action, executives of Station WNAC are offering transmitting service to local and state police. Each half hour between programs as cases might warrant special messages or descriptions of culprits may be sent out over the Yankee Network, according to an announcement made yesterday by representatives of the New England radio network.

OFFER WELCOMED

City, County and Commonwealth officialdom has expressed appreciation for this co-operation. Ways and means to utilize the service fully will be made immediately.

Columbia scores a notable victory over NBC this week with the acquisition of Bing Crosby, latest microphone idol of ear cuppers. A chain program featuring the California crooner will be arranged this coming week.

Staff announcers and production men have nicknamed special sound effect technicians. They call them racketeers.

There is one popular song certain never to make a hit with those in charge of circulation promotion for newspapers. It is called Many Happy Returns of the Day. Ed Young, the Yankee philosopher, gets credit for that one.

Strange as it may seem, though quite authentic, is the fact that only 67 per cent of the music aired by NBC comes from New York.

DON'T MENTION IT!

Aidan Redmond, ill for so long and now back at his WBZ announcing and production duties, thanks your favorite newspaper and your Uncle N. F. T. for telling listeners of his illness. His mail has been tremendous this past week.

David Sarnoff, president of RCA, [illegible] telling how fast did we go ahead. Television, now regarded as No Man's Land by sound engineers, is liable to develop by leaps and bounds before the conclusion of 1931.

Radio rahjahs don't seem to be in any hurry to arrange for football broadcasts. Careful consideration of the most desired gridiron contests appears to favor Notre Dame, Southern California and West Point. Yale and Harvard apparently do not strike the microphone moguls as big attractions on the air.

NOT SO GOOD

No little indignation is shown in Paris these days as American fashion experts tell the French an audience of style creations in the United States. Parisian designers are doing everything possible to exclude radio descriptions of what is being worn by men and women on our shores.

So far there is only one Boston beauty going out after the Miss Radio of 1931 honors. Dores Glover of WNAC has already filed application and leaves for New York this week to exhibit her pulchritude. The honor will be bestowed during the big Radio Show opening September 21st.

On the Air

Vice-President Curtis, who is as hard to get to a mike as his superior is easy, speaks for the Order of Moose convention over WNAC at 9.45 tonight. His topic is 'Child Welfare.' . . . When 'Old Ironsides' turns her bow into N. Y. harbor Sat., her entry will be described by NBC. . . . The launching and flight of the navy's super-dirigible Akron from her Ohio hangar, will be NBC-ed at some future undetermined date, sometime after the 29th. . . . Na[illegible] and nice things about the Erlanger, Earl Carroll and Buddy Rogers will be told by the man who once was their press man, Bernard Sobel, over WAAB at 6 tonight.

A challenge to gangdom voiced by national state and civic leaders by a mass demonstration in N. Y. tonight will be b'dcast over WJZ at 8, and again at 10.30. Bainbridge Colby, Sen. Wagner, Charles Francis Coe, Gen. Smedley Butler and Police Commr. Mulrooney will speak.

Bing Crosby, whose name is becoming a household institution, has been signed by CBS after weeks of negotiating between the singer and a dozen radio and theatrical interests. CBS hasn't decided just what will be done with Crosby since he can lead an orch. as well as sing. It is likely however, that his voice will be featured in a nightly sustaining "spot," to start in a few weeks. Crosby, a law student, was discovered by Paul Whiteman, six years ago, who made him the mainstay of the Rhythm Boys. Later he struck out for himself and was a sensation on the Coast. If his roving spirit allows him to stay in N. Y. add another name to your list of radio stars. Another potential star, an NBC protege, is Russ Columbo, featured nightly on the network, but still unnoticed locally. He is a product of the Coast—and croons . . . NBC gives a gala air party the 23th in honor of WFBR, Baltimore, which has just joined with the network . . . Preview of "An American Tragedy," to be seen at the Olympia and Uptown theaters the 29th, will be b'cast on WNAC Friday . . . A dozen new p grams will commence the first week in Sept. And both networks will lend air time to the amateur golf championships as well as to a flock of horse races. In addition CBS will send Ted Husing here the 29th to report the doubles tennis matches.

Crab Meat as Tasty Lunch

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast over Station WAAB

IN OUR ZEAL to avoid heating foods during 'dog days' we sometimes bend too far backward and deprive our families of the strength-giving food elements so vital to bodily well-being whether the weather's hot or cold.

Martha Lee

It becomes a real problem to choose our foods wisely and well. Right now you are probably planning of the very same food that I am, Japanese crab meat, as an ideal hot weather food since it contains more protein than any other fish as well as iodine and other nutritious elements.

The Japanese crab meat stands at the top of the list in valuable iodine content too, and when we combine the juicy delicious meat of this King of Sea Foods in salads or sandwiches, with crisp lettuce and mayonnaise, the all-important vitamins A and C and the sunshine vitamin D enter the picture in percentages too high to be ignored by right-thinking folks.

ZESTFUL SEA TANG

Whether you serve this crab meat in cocktails, salads, sandwiches, canapes, omelette or au gratin, you'll find its fresh sea tang adds just that zestful flavor and snap to tempt heat-weaned appetites. And for emergencies, with a supply of Japanese crab meat on your pantry shelf and a head of lettuce, a cucumber and a couple of tomatoes at your elbow, you can think up a variety of dishes to coax the home folks' jaded summer appetites.

As an example we've illustrated for you today a simple Japanese Crab Carlo recipe that we hope you'll try, and probably can improve on.

CRAB MEAT CARLO

Remove the seeds from a green pepper and parboil in water to which has been added a pinch of soda. Cut in strips and then across in small squares. Cut a canned pimiento the same way. Add these peppers to 2 cups of white sauce, add a small can of Japanese crab meat, a cup of olives sliced across and add 1 egg slightly beaten. Serve on toast or crackers.

You'll notice that we're serving our crab specialty on the crispy, appetizing crackers. These belong on the shelf of every family and a package in the pantry means preparedness against most of the emergencies the homemaker is heir to. Whether as a crisp accompaniment for soup, or toasted to serve with salad or cheese, or as a carrier for sandwich spreads, or in place of toast, these krispy crackers are always satisfying and delicious.

REFRESHING PAUSE

To complete this hot weather combination, you'll see we're suggesting for the cold drink our good friend Moxie.

Did you ever come home after a hard day's work feeling utterly dejected and at odds with the world? Maybe business is slow or then again it might be just one of these well known yet unaccountable attacks of the blues.

Visit the ice box and find a bottle of Moxie waiting for you. Even as you pour it out, the blues begin to fade.

Remember also that Moxie, America's national health drink, is a tonic endorsed by millions, and then—Buy that case.

Which way do you feel? When you're with a crowd at a soda fountain and someone says, "Let's have a drink?" Do you say to yourself, "Oh, no, let's not, because you remember that last drink you had, how it was too rich, or too strong, or too weak, or left a sickening taste?

Fire Halts Traffic

The heavy stream of heavy traffic through the Jamaicaway was tied up for more than 15 minutes late yesterday as firemen extinguished a blaze caused by a short circuit of wires in a new sedan owned by Mrs. Catherine Enos of 232 Jamaicaway.

HERE'S QUICK METHOD OF PREPARING A TASTY REPAST

Martha Lee today suggests a platter of Crab Meat Carlo. And here's the recipe. First, dice parboiled green peppers and red pimientos.

Next, to two cups of well-seasoned white sauce, add one can of Japanese crab meat, sliced olives and one beaten egg.

Next serve on Krispy crackers, with a healthful cold drink. Not only an extremely delectable dish but one so easily put together.

Hash Boon to Campers

What's more appreciated than corned beef hash at summer camps and beach cottages—especially if you can pick the hash right off the shelf and have it ready to serve in ten short minutes.

But oh I beg of you, don't make the mistake of just stirring the hash around in the frying pan until it's heated through. Do give it the crisp, brown crust that's traditional with corned beef hash.

COOK UNDER SLOW HEAT

To accomplish this, put a generous tablespoon of butter in a heavy iron or aluminum frying pan. Then turn in your hash, pat it smooth and cook it over very slow heat until the lovely brown crust is formed. To make it extra good, you might add a few tablespoons of cream, pouring it on a little at a time in the center of the hash.

It shouldn't go around the edges to mix with the butter. Served with toast and thick chili sauce and coffee, what more could the hungry hunter ask for breakfast, lunch or dinner? For breakfast, of course, you may want to dress it up with poached eggs and a few crispy pieces of bacon.

LUNCH SUGGESTION

For lunch, a new wrinkle is to boil the eggs, not too hard, peel them while still hot and make little mounds of the hash. Place a whole hard-boiled egg, dusted with paprika, in the center of each mound. Garnish with bits of bacon and slices of sweet cucumber pickle, and there you have something to write home about.

Don't forget that under this same brand name that you find on your tin of ready-to-heat-and-eat cornedbeef hash comes delicious lamb stew and beef stew—another indispensable for the hungry hunter, whether he hunts fish, game or—summer poultry.

$1000 FOR CRAB RECIPES

Of course you are going to compete for the thousand dollars in cash prizes offered for the best original recipes using fancy Japanese Crab Meat?

Simply choose your favorite crab meat recipe that you've adapted to your family's taste and send it with the label from a can of Japanese crab meat, to the Japan Canned Crab Packers and Exporters' Association, Room 3000, Graybar Bldg., New York city. You can send as many recipes as you wish, providing there's a Japanese crab meat label with each one.

The first prize will be $500 in gold, the second $200 in gold, the third $100, then there will be 10 prizes of $10 each and 20 prizes of $5 each.

For judges there'll be Katharine Fisher of Good Housekeeping Institute, Greta Palmer (N. Y. World-Telegram), Esther E. Kimmel (N. Y. Herald Tribune Institute), and your old friends, Marjorie Mills and Martha Lee.

All recipes must be sent in not later than September 15 (remember you are going to mail them to the Japan Canned Crab Packers Association, Room 3000, Graybar Bldg., N. Y. C., and not to Martha Lee). The winners will be announced in October.

Now don't let the fact that you haven't been successful in other recipe contests prevent your investing a little time, stationery and 2 cent stamps in this new, worthwhile contest.

Booklet of Pork Recipes Free

You're buying New England dressed fresh pork, of course. Wouldn't you like a book of 21 recipes, showing interesting ways to serve this delicious and economical meat? Fresh roast ham with cider sauce for instance, chop suey, pork sausage with rice and pineapple, and a bacon omelet? I'd love to send you a copy today, if you'll just drop me a post card.

Few Vacancies in Cooking Class

There are still a few vacancies in the Homemakers' Wednesday afternoon class of our fall cooking school, to open later in the season. If you wish to share in the pleasures and privileges of this free school, we suggest an early enrollment. Classes are held from 2 to 4 p. m. and cover every form of practical, modern cookery. A course covers 10 weeks, at the close of which time a diploma is awarded those attending 7 of the 10 lessons. Why not plan to enjoy these popular, worthwhile cooking matinees with your neighbor?

SECOND SECTION

THIS IS LIFE

SOME NEWS ITEMS THAT MADE ME HAPPY ON A COOL DAY

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ROBERT E. ROGERS

A COOL, SUNNY DAY, brisk, with a peppy, dry nor'easter blowing. The kind of day on which work isn't so easy. Curiously, I have found this summer that the days when work comes easiest and most natural are those when the mercury hovers around 90 in the shade and you can just wring water out of the air. You're so uncomfortable, anyway, that you might just as well sit still and pound the machine.

But a brisk wind seems to blow the ideas clear out of my head. So far today just a list of "Little Things That Please Me in the News," little straws in the wind of common sense and good intentions.

Literacy

In Cleveland they have a new law by which precinct election workers have to prove that they are reasonably literate. Five of them were thrown out because they spelled the name of their party variously "Democraitic," "Dimacrit," "Dinocrac," "Dinacratik" and "Dinectec." And "Republican" is an even harder word!

A Stitch in Time

City employes who wish to attend fraternity conclaves and conventions will have to do it hereafter on their own vacation time, not on the city time. So Mayor Curley has decided. With junketing getting to be the accepted thing in business and political life, a few stitches in time like this may save a good deal. An honest graft and probably not very harmful, but in the long run expensive.

And another stitch, on a larger scale, Senator Nicholson's announcement that he has retained counsel to bring injunction proceedings to halt the awarding of state highway construction contracts to others than the lowest bidders. Take care of the pennies——. Reasonable competition is good for the soul of our Massachusetts business men.

Fair Play

Dr. Bigelow says: "When you are sick and need a nurse, you want a good one and you don't care where she comes from. And if a good nurse answered your call when you needed her, you wouldn't turn around and discharge her unless you had a better reason than that she came from Nova Scotia. When we need nurses, we get the best we can, and if citizens do not apply then we take aliens. I won't discharge a single alien nurse now being employed under my jurisdiction, unless I am ordered to by the Attorney-General. I certainly have not asked him for his opinion and I do not intend to."

Sound, sensible Christian doctrine! Once more, as in his defiance of the sentimentalists' clamor about "the poor dogs"—that ought never to be allowed to run loose in the crowded city streets—the man shows a backbone and a sense of responsibility to the public rather than to the politician.

General Butler Takes Off the Gag

General Smedley Butler has formally applied to be retired on October 1st after 33 years' service. Hooray! Not that we do not like General Butler and not that we do not approve of the prudent rule that curbs the speech of servants of the nation. But General Butler in the role of gad-fly, as Socrates put it, will probably be a sight more useful than in service. Not the least useful part of the social machinery is the crank!

The Church Militant

A young Catholic priest who knows boxing has served notice that he is going to clean up his parish in Chicago in the interests of the young people of his church. He has given the last rites to 12 murdered men in two months, five in one week. So he is going crusading on his own account.

In these days of almost universal criticism that organized religion seems able to do nothing against lawlessness and crime, this is refreshing. As Shaw's inspired munitions maker in "Major Barbara" said:

"You've got to fight the devil with fire. Not until the church people are willing to take to evil's weapons to wipe evil out will anything get done."

Patriot

A letter written by John Adams has been discovered in which he reminds us that Virginians like to claim the credit which Massachusetts men should at least share. "The speech of James Otis in 1761 did more for the Revolutionary cause than Patrick Henry did in the whole course of his life. If Patrick Henry was Demosthenes and Richard Henry Lee was Cicero, James Otis was Isaiah and Ezekiel united." And yet it was John Adams who forced the nomination of George Washington as general-in-chief of our armies, to the lasting disappointment of his friend, John Hancock of Massachusetts.

Telegraph Emily Post!

For the price of a telegram the Postal Telegraph Company will furnish you with complete social secretarial service directed by a Long Island society woman. This has its amusing side. Competition in the telegraph business must be pretty stiff. First, ready-to-send messages, then theater ticket service, and now the complete Greenhorn's Guide to New York.

Yet all this is encouraging because it is meeting a growing need. People are becoming increasingly aware that gentlefolks' ways are likely to be better than their ways, and they are eager to learn how to do things properly. Manners maketh the man! Or, as the late Stuart Sherman once put it: "Even in the shaggy bolshevik breast there lurks a furtive desire for a silk hat and fur-trimmed overcoat, and a slumbering but inextinguishable liking for the manners that go with the clothes, the sentiments that go with the manners, and the principles that support the sentiments." So send a telegram and learn how!

Courage

Young Rupert Maclaurin, son of the great dead president of Technology, crosses the Andes on skis, and a boy in Holyoke hitch-hikes 20 miles on crutches to offer his blood for infantile paralysis serum, and the Lindys toss all night on a foggy stormy sea waiting for the dawn.

These are some of the things in the paper that made me happy today.

"KNOW THYSELF"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"Know thyself." How hard we try to do that, most of us, that we may grow grander mentally, bigger of heart, and—we "must admit"—that that part of the world we love and whose love we crave, may love us better.

What do we really look like to the family who eyes us across the table, the friend who sips our tea under the oak tree, the child who turns the lustre of new blue eyes upon us with an unworldly stare, the lover who kisses our wrist and ear and says we suit him, the husband who calls us darling and really loves us, but can get a mad on at us just the same? What do we really look like—and of what stuff do we seem made? How a woman would like to know, to realize, in the shape of a distinct picture, like a portrait on the wall!

She THINKS, is almost sure, that her hair is a nice gold—or a wonderful cosey brown, or the fabled black of the faery-ebony, that her eyes are clear, that though her nose is the skeleton in the closet and could be easily revamped without anybody missing the old one, she believes her mouth nice—really rather pretty! But once she caught herself unaware in the glass—a strange woman coming toward her, with too long a neck, and an unhandy walk. It was herself! Then she discovered that many of her pretty moments in the mirror were unmeaningly posed. She held mouth, eyes, head and body in the most becoming attitude. Almost shut her eyes to the image until it was arranged to please. Who then, is the real figure of the woman that every one sees? What is her guise to those she loves? It is easier to know what strangers see when they contemplate her than what she is to these—the beloved.

She THINKS, is almost sure, that she knows and does battle with her own flaws of temperament and character. She believes that she is unselfish. Knows she has a temper, but downs it much of the time. She tries very hard to be sweet, tolerant, forgiving, kind, amusing, serving, and by these muses, to be beloved and needed. She believes she is. But sometimes, searching the dark glass where rarely a vague, but startling self-revelation will swim to the surface almost and show itself, she remembers overhearing a painful criticism of herself. Words like a blinding, dumfounding moment of the [illegible] of a lightning flash. She never knew ANYONE [illegible] about her! Has she been all this time holding her [illegible] most becoming angles of her character, posing her nature as she does her features? A woman wonders.

And wondering seeks to know herself—and finds [illegible]. Those we love and who love us—just LOVE us—they do not always say whether they like us!

Father Gets Jailed Then He Avenges Girl, 6

The story of a father who deliberately planned his own arrest so he might "get" a man accused of mistreating his six-year-old daughter was unfolded in East Cambridge court today as James Boleyne, his face and head a mass of cuts and bruises, faced the court on a serious charge.

Arraigned after Boleyne was Frank Sullivan, 30, of Douglas st., who, police said, plotted his own arrest for drunkenness and inflicted a terrible beating on Boleyne as they waited in the detention room for hearing.

Boleyne, who lives in Brookline st., Cambridge, was arrested on complaint of the father of an 11-year-old girl. According to Sullivan, his daughter told a tale of similar outrage.

Then, police say, Sullivan engaged in a drinking bout, planning, hoping to be placed in the cell with Boleyne.

They were confined in different cells, but Sullivan's opportunity came in the courthouse. Before officers heard Boleyne's cries and rushed to his rescue, Boleyne was so badly battered that his lawyer and the officer who arrested him failed to recognize him.

Boleyne's wife, waiting in the corridor, was the first to recognize him, and ran to him screaming.

Boleyne was held in $5,000 for hearing Aug. 28.

Sullivan pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness and was sentenced to 30 days in jail.

"That sentence will take care of everything," Judge Edward A. Counihan said.

Kincaide's Estate Valued at $981,975

State Senator Henry L. Kincaide of Quincy, who died in 1929, left an estate valued at $981,975, according to an inventary filed in Dedham today. The bulk goes to the widower.

The report of the appraisers, John C. Kiley, Edward H. Rudd and Francis J. Welker, showed the estate was comprised of $606,000 in real estate, with the remainder personal property.

CALORIC STANDARD PROPERLY MEASURES DIET

Heat Units Produce Fat If Energy Is Unused

You may be wondering what this calory is that is so important in the reducing diet prescribed by the New York Health Commissioner Shirley W. Wynne.

The calory is not, as you might think, a unit indicating the amount of fat contained in a food. It is a heat unit.

Scientifically, the calory is the amount of heat required to raise four pounds of water one Fahrenheit degree of temperature. Heat is energy, so when you read that a certain quantity of food contains so many calories it means that the food, when properly digested in the body, will generate that amount of heat to be transformed into bodily energy.

GOOD STANDARD

If you don't use that energy the food which is read to create it will be stored up in the body as fat. Consequently the number of calories of heat or energy a food will generate is a good standard to use in figuring how much fat or unused energy it will make.

When you follow a diet which provides fewer calories than your body needs in its daily functions your body burns up the surplus energy which has been stored away for just an emergency. It is important, however, to make the body burn only 1,000 calories of its surplus energy a day.

If you count on your reserve for more than that you may weaken yourself dangerously. That is why the table of exercise key numbers and normal weights is given below—so that you can figure just what your reducing diet should be if you are not to suffer from the reducing process. The table furnishes an easy way to discover [illegible] body needs.

Here's the table of [illegible] key numbers.

WOMEN

Height Feet	Inches	[illegible]
4	10	[illegible]
4	11	118
5	—	[illegible]
5	1	[illegible]
5	2	[illegible]
5	3	[illegible]
5	4	[illegible]
5	5	[illegible]
5	6	[illegible]
5	7	[illegible]
5	8	[illegible]
5	9	[illegible]
5	10	151

MEN

Height Feet	Inches	[illegible]
5	3	[illegible]
5	4	[illegible]
5	5	[illegible]
5	6	[illegible]
5	7	[illegible]
5	8	[illegible]
5	9	[illegible]
5	10	[illegible]
5	11	166
6	—	172
6	1	178
6	2	181
6	3	190

Consult table for your normal weight. Multiply that by 15 if you take no exercise

17 if you take light exercise
19 if you take moderate exercise
22 if you do muscular labor
25 if you do severe labor

You then have the number of calories for your daily food requirements if you were not overweight.

From this number subtract 1000 calories and you have your proper reducing diet. A safe reducing diet provides for you to use 1000 calories a day for the fat stored in your body.

DAILY TRUE STORY
THE FATAL SECRET

MME. DUCHESNE HAD KILLED A MAN

EVERYONE IN the hushed courtroom was surprised at the summing up of the prosecutor. He had been so relentless in his cross-examination, so vigorous in the course of the trial. And now—his venom had turned to milk, his indignation to water. Had he been given the order to "go easy"?

The entire case seemed to be enveloped in mystery. Mme. Delphine Duchesne had killed a man. That was clear enough. She had entered the office of William Hanlon, an English insurance broker she had met during the war, and pumped three bullets into him. She admitted the fact. But when the lawyers began to unravel the motives behind the slaying, the case suddenly assumed a mysterious significance.

Seated on the stand, [illegible] tearful-eyed witness, she had to plead in her own defense.

"He was [illegible] and told lies about me. His stories drove my husband from me. When I came to ask him to leave me alone he tried to attack me. In the struggle the gun was discharged."

The prosecutor had torn her plea to shreds. A stenographer had testified that she had come in, spoken a few words in French, and fired point blank. The coroner's physician had declared the autopsy showed the bullets had been fired several feet away.

To Save Name
Mme. Duchesne Testifies

"Isn't it a fact," shouted the prosecutor, "that you were in love with Mr. Hanlon since the war? That you came to ask him to return that love and that he spurned you on the afternoon you killed him?"

"No, no, no," cried Mme. Duchesne. "It is not true. I killed him to save my good name."

"You have testified that Mr. Hanlon drove your husband from you. Can you tell the jury who is your husband or where he is now?"

Mme. Duchesne kept silent.

"Isn't it a fact that the name the court knows you by is not your right name?"

Again the accused kept silent.

"Everything about you is a lie!" stormed the prosecutor.

"No, no. I was trying to win back my honor."

In summing up, the defense attorney took advantage of the mystery surrounding the woman. She was too noble, he told the jury, to betray her husband or drag her relatives into notoriety. She had been reared in the finest atmosphere—and she merely had followed the code of her people wherein a woman's name is above a man's life.

And the jury returned the softest verdict, manslaughter.

Mystery followed Delphine Duchesne into the prison. She was a strange [illegible] personality. Her eyes [illegible] a keen, unfathomable look [illegible] of aristocratic pride—and disappointment.

Rumor [illegible] she could have won her freedom by talking—but that she preferred to gamble with prison for the sake of some greater power [illegible] more important than freedom. [illegible] she bore her prison sentence painfully.

Occasionally she received some cryptic message and her replies were just as mystifying. [illegible] one day she sat down and wrote a letter to the consul of her country.

"I am judged and condemned," she wrote, "not as a woman who had been obliged to defend her name and her rights, her principles and her duties; in one word, all that our beautiful education has taught us—that honor comes before everything else—but as a man who killed his friend, without provocation and without reason.

"I was robbed, wronged, scoffed at, dragged into the gutter. My only right was not to weaken in the beginning, not to fall.

"Of that weakness they had made a crime and I am punished for it. All that for a thief, a man who lived only on expedients.

"I shall answer for my government only to certain questions which I did not answer clearly if those can be of some benefit to me and necessary."

The newspapers buzzed. What did she mean by defending her duties? Duties to whom? And she was ready to answer to her government! Why to her government if it was merely a case of a woman betrayed?

The consul replied to Mme. Duchesne. He would look into the matter. And he did. Within a fortnight an official letter was written and her government interested itself in her case.

Suddenly, the judge who presided at the trial urged her release. The prosecuting attorney who had pulled his fangs assented [illegible] her probation. An appeal for commutation of sentence was made.

At the same time the consulate made public these facts:

"During the war Mme. Duchesne had been wedded to a very high official. She had accidentally overheard a state secret. Shortly afterward she was entertaining a number of foreigners, including Hanlon. In a moment of indiscretion, flushed with wine, she let out the secret. Hanlon betrayed the secret to the enemy. Her husband was accused and discredited. In turn, he accused her of dealing with the foe and drove her from his home. Since that time she had been wandering across the earth looking for her betrayer. When she finally found him she begged him to admit the truth and absolve her and her husband. She felt she never could return to her native land and to her husband without vindication. In order to frighten him she shot into the air. The bullet struck Hanlon."

The governor pondered the case, but waited. And after she had served her minimum term he ordered her sentence commuted.

Reporters met her on her release as she prepared to end her long exile.

"Now that you are free and vindicated, will you tell us who you are [illegible]"

"[illegible] learned my lesson," she answered, gravely, "and I must hold my tongue."

CRIPPLED BOY'S MOTHER FIGHTS OIL FARM

DEPICTS PERIL TO CHILDREN IN REVERE

Other Women Utter Strong Protests Against Tanks in Chelsea Creek

A dramatic plea by the mother of a crippled boy was made to State Fire Marshal John W. Reth today to revoke the permit for a big oil farm in Revere.

At a crowded hearing at the State House [illegible] Mrs. Anna [illegible] son [illegible] begged Marshal [illegible]

"What would happen to my boy in case of a fire or explosion?" she asked.

"Mr. Marshal, you wouldn't sleep night or day if you knew that outside your door stood tanks of inflammable oil ready to wipe you off the earth.

WOULD BRING FEAR

"Please have some consideration for us down there. We haven't much, but what we have we want to keep clean and free from danger. It is not a business section, it's a residential section. Bring oil tanks down there and you will bring fear into the hearts of every mother."

The meeting was one of numerous [illegible] hearing on the question of revoking a permit granted by the Revere city council for the erection of storage oil tanks on Chelsea Creek.

Myron [illegible] appeared as counsel for the protestant residents of Revere and East Boston, while Atty. Francis Leahy was counsel for the oil company.

The first speaker, Miss Theresa Pasce of East Boston, said if the state would buy her property she would be glad to sell, but as long as she owns property she would consider the oil farm a menace.

PERIL IN BRUSH FIRES.

Mrs. Winifred A. Harr of 166 Waldemar ave., East Boston, said underbrush added to burning oil would cause a situation which could not be combated.

Announcing he was protesting as a citizen and not as counsel, Atty. Alexander J. Drinkwater of 22 Broadway, [illegible] of an oil farm.

He recalled the Chelsea fire and said:

"Should any act of God or any act of carelessness owing to the intervention of the elements, start a fire in the tanks, mere man could do nothing but become annihilated. Should lightning strike them, Revere would be no longer on the map."

Mrs. Francis Hoffman of 10 Centennial ave., Revere, who said she [illegible] 30 [illegible] said there is fire danger where there is oil.

Mrs. Charles E. Emerson of Revere also stressed the alleged danger from fire or explosion.

IRMA ERCOLINA

IRMA GAVE PINT OF BLOOD.

The first public clinic to aid Greater Boston infantile paralysis sufferers, held at the Junior high school in Watertown, was so great a success that other clinics will follow. Much precious blood to be used to inoculate infantile paralysis sufferers was taken from many former sufferers of that malady. How willing they were. All seemed to be wreathed with smiles as they stepped up to do their part in aiding others. You see Isabelle Howem, 8, 58 Marshall street, Watertown, with her dog. She was passed as perfect specimen, but the doctor was unable to make a proper connection with the vein. Isabelle is shown as she waited to be called. She was sad to know that she could not aid. A pint of blood was taken from the arm of Irma Ercolina, 16, 54 Grant street, Somerville. She smiled her satisfaction at being able to aid. (Staff photo.)

REAL P. O. VET AT CONVENTION

When the Chicago World's Fair was held in 1893, Thomas F. Scully had 13 years service in the post office tucked under his belt and felt like a veteran.

Today 38 years after—he arrived in Boston, still an active worker in the Chicago post office, to invite the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks to hold their 1933 convention at the next Chicago World's Fair

Scully, now 70, is the oldest member of the association and both he and his daugher, Irene, who has been in postoffice work ten years are delegates to the 32d convention of the organization, being held now at the Hotel Statler

"For the first 35 years of my service as a postoffice clerk I reported for work at 6 a. m. and in the old days we worked 12 hours a day, seven days a week," he said.

"So if there's any one thing responsible for my health and vitality, that keeps me going so actively at my age, it was the hard work that was my lot."

He has seen the pay of beginners increased from $100 to [illegible] and 'other good things.' In 1893 he was on the entertainment committee for the convention and expects to take a leading role in the convention Chicago hopes to have two years hence

CARMEN CLAMOR FOR ACTION ON JOBLESS AID

Relief Measures, Not Commission Reports, Needed, Resolution to Hoover Declares

Enactment of relief measures and not commissions for surveys is what the country needs now, President William D. Mahon of the Amalgamted Association of Street and Railway Electric Railway Employes, declared to more than 750 members in convention today in Hotel Bradford.

He offered a resolution asking President Hoover to call a special session of Congress to provide relief for the jobless

Mayor Curley who appeared at the convention unexpectedly, after reading of the proposed resolution urged the members to place themselves on record as in favor of the special session

ACTION, NOT REPORTS

Mahon's remarks followed a comment on the recent appointment of Walter S Gifford as the head of a commission to study unemployment relief. Mahon urged the carmen to serve notice as a unit on President Hoover that it wated no more commission reports.

President Mahon stated that the people of New England have no idea of the conditions in other sections and that the only relief to be obtained for the thousands of hungry mouths during the coming winter must come from government funds, as private relief sources have been exhausted

WALL STREET ASSAILED

President Mahon condemned Wall Street and the politicians whom he said "can throw billions of dollars into a war in Europe and feed the people of European countries, but up to the present time have shown no inclination of feeding the suffering here

The first real business will be the report of the credential committee, and it is this report that delegates from the local Carmen's Union are awaiting with considerable interest

It will render recommendations as to the eligibility of W[illegible] Walsh as a delegate in the convention Walsh was recently reinstated as a member of Boston Local 589 by order of the Massachusetts Supreme Court having been expelled from membership by the parent body in 1924

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor was scheduled to address the convention late in the day. Speculation was rife as to what the labor leader would say on the unemployment [illegible] and the proposal to present the resolution on the special session of Congress through his organization.

ARE THE MEN ABOUT TO BECOME KISS SHY?

By HELEN ROWLAND

MEN WILL soon become kiss-shy. A popular young bachelor assures me of this.

If the women continue to become wilder and wilder, the once dominant sex will have to take matters into its own hands, and do something to make the world safe for romance. If women continue to be the hunters and pursuers, men will have to defend themselves.

HELEN ROWLAND.

SOMEBODY must observe the conventionalities and help keep up the moral standards and the social forms.

Like the mid-Victorian girl (so this young bachelor predicts), a man will soon be defending his honor, bragging of his chastity, boasting that he has never been kissed, and, if necessary, walking back home.

Already there are signs of it. There are lots of men have stopped smoking cigarettes and given up profanity, because these things are so effeminate. And most men are going around the beaches, modestly clothed in long fantastically embroidered robes, which reach 'way, 'way down to their delicate ankles, while the girls brazenly sprawl around half-nude and eye them speculatively.

If women insist on being bold and aggressive, men will simply have to retire into their shells and make themselves unattainable, in order to escape the wild, pursuant female. And lots of them are doing that.

A sleek, strong, well-bred young man who has been brought up by his mother with high, beautiful ideas about love and marriage, will not yield his lips to the promiscuous kisses of every girl he meets at a petting-party, or [illegible] the casual embraces of every woman who enters a taxi with him.

This sort of thing has gone on just as far as the men will STAND it!

The day will come—and this young bachelor has not a doubt of it—when a man will treasure his reputation and will carefully avoid being seen in the company of a girl, who is known as a home-breaker, a man-tamer and a Donna Juanita; whose reputation as a lady is not spotless, or who has no respect for his sex. He would rather sit at home and read a good book!

• • •

All of which, if true, gives the sentimentalists and the idealists hope that things will change for the better as they always DO. But, the men will have to change them—the women WON'T!

Daily Sun Bath Is Best Tonic for Health

By DR. COPELAND.

WHEN DRIVING through Central Park I am always thrilled by the beautiful trees and green pastures located within the very heart of the greatest city in the world. It never surprises me that there are so many people in the park. The citizens are attracted there by the beauty and fragrance of the trees and flowers.

Dr. Copeland

In every park there are many men with their coats and hats off, sunning themselves on the park benches. I approve of this with all my heart.

A sun bath is one of the best health tonics at our disposal. I advise all my readers to take advantage of the beneficial rays of the sun, at every time of the year.

Even though you may be living in the city and cannot afford to go to the country, you can get sunlight. If you do not live near a park, a street car or other conveyance will quickly take you to one of the many city parks.

It is not uncommon to see men, women and children on the roofs of buildings. Such an exposure to the sun is often more advantageous than the park, in view of its privacy. It is a good thing to remove as much clothing as possible and take these sun baths as often as you can.

In spite of the passing [illegible] [illegible] now will insure health and pleasure for the coming months. Sun baths for children are particularly important.

The first time that you take a sun bath, expose yourself for a very brief time. Gradually increase the exposure until your skin becomes accustomed to the light. Remember that in small doses, the sun refreshes and benefits the body. In large doses it burns and does damage.

"YOU KNEW . . . did your mother tell you—? that Collin was a twin? The other twin died. A dear little girl! Thirty years ago, but I've never forgotten," she said.

"It was shortly after that that we went to England and France to live . . . Your uncle," she added, "was very kind, he understood. I was not young at the time, I was thirty or so, and I knew I would have no more children. It was a great blow to me . . . to us both."

There was a little silence. Fanchon felt her heart soften a [illegible] Evelyn Howard. She was not [illegible] woman's blood. But Evelyn was dead [illegible] nothing. Fanchon was alive. If she could be to this woman what Evelyn would have been; if with her own longing for affection, for home and for safety, she could even be more than Evelyn would have been, would that not be counted, perhaps, in her favor? Evelyn, she knew, from the little she had seen of her, was less concerned with her emotional relationship to her aunt than what that aunt held out to her in the way of promises of ease, luxury, money [illegible] perhaps [illegible] marry well. With these things [illegible] What [illegible] was prepared to give in return was something very different [illegible] something into which money and material things did not and could not enter.

She spoke stumbling a little over the unaccustomed form of address.

She spoke, stumbling a little over the unaccustomed form of address.

"I—I want to make you as happy, Aunt Jennie," she said in her low charming husky voice, "as you have made me already."

A little silence fell between them. And in it Fanchon vowed to dedicate herself to this woman's service, whatever it might be.

Presently: "Here we are," Mrs. Carstairs said brightly. "I'm putting you in one of the guest rooms for your own rooms are to be done over for you this summer."

[illegible] was an apartment on upper Fifth ave., a penthouse apartment overlooking the Park and the reservoir. A man servant opened to them and Mrs. Carstairs said, "My niece, Miss Howard, James."

James, an elderly person, seemed genuinely pleased. He gave Fanchon [illegible] little speech of welcome and Fanchon smiled at him gently. She realized then that to her servants [illegible] Jennie Carstairs. It was easy to see why. James, explained Mrs. Carstairs, leading the way in, "has been with me for many years and so is one of the family. I brought him up from the country to look after us for a few days."

The apartment seemed enormous to Fanchon. She caught glimpses of a huge dining room and music room on one side, living room and library on the other, all opening off a square hall. These rooms, explained Mrs. Carstairs further, all opened upon a terrace and Fanchon could see through the long French windows flowers blooming and small trees, gay chairs and couches and awnings.

"I keep the apartment in livable shape," Mrs. Carstairs went on, "as Collin runs in and out all summer and must have a place to stay."

She hesitated and began again, her clear skin flushing.

"Collin . . ." she went on, "is up North. You may have wondered why he isn't in town to meet you?"

"No," said Fanchon with perfect truth, "I hadn't wondered at all."

"I wrote you," the other woman said, "about his attitude. But I would rather explain more fully later."

She took Fanchon into a lovely room on the second floor. It had a huge connecting bath.

"It is at the end of the hall from me," Mrs. Carstairs told her. "Your own room, when it is ready, opens on the gallery and is next to mine."

A middle-aged woman was waiting in the room.

"This is Emma," Mrs. Carstairs told Fanchon, "she will look after you."

[illegible] The bed was turned down, the window [illegible] negligee and [illegible]

"I guessed at the size," Mrs. Carstairs said. "You are taller than I thought, but we will manage to get some little frocks for you before we go down to the Island and with the minimum of discomfort. You wrote me, you know, that you had very little."

Fanchon flushed in shame for Evelyn Howard who could pack her trunk to come East and write her aunt that she "had very little." Had Fanchon been in her place!—she would have gotten along with what she had and said nothing out of sheer stubborn pride. She said now:

"Oh, but I didn't mean . . . I can manage perfectly well with what I have."

She wondered a little wildly just what clothes the trunk would contain. Evelyn, as she remembered her from shipboard, had rather run to frills and furbelows and clothes of an inexpensive material and lots of them.

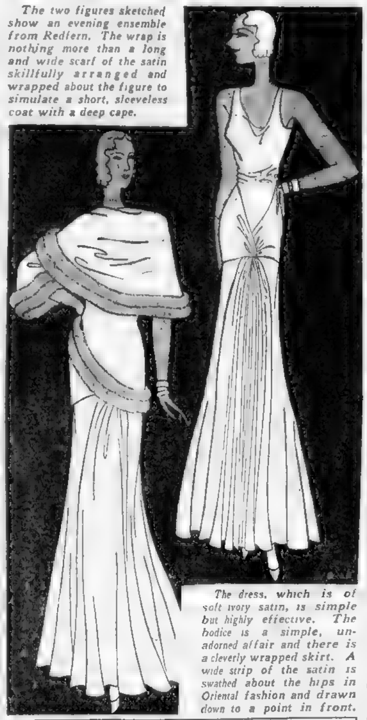
REDFERN WRAPS A SCARF

An Evening Ensemble

SKETCHED IN PARIS



The two figures sketched show an evening ensemble from Redfern. The wrap is nothing more than a long and wide scarf of the satin skillfully arranged and wrapped about the figure to simulate a short, sleeveless coat with a deep cape.

The dress, which is of soft ivory satin, is simple but highly effective. The bodice is a simple, unadorned affair and there is a cleverly wrapped skirt. A wide strip of the satin is swathed about the hips in Oriental fashion and drawn down to a point in front.

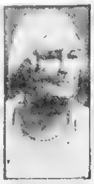
Grandpaw Raised 'Hawgs' in the Old-Fashioned Way

By WINIFRED BLACK

CAN HOGS live without mud?

The United States Department of Agriculture says they can.

And the same authority declares that the cleaner you keep the hogs the better the [illegible] they make.



Winifred Black

[illegible] it [illegible] live in the world, where ideas change fast, isn't it?

Now there was old Grandpa Hornblower down at the corner. He raised his own hogs, only he always called them hawgs, and he had his own smoke houses, and he cured his own hams and bacons and sides of meat, and you always had a [illegible] at one end of the table and one of Grandpa Hornblower's hams at the other end of every Christmas Day as soon as the sleigh bells began to ring.

The ham was boiled and skinned and stuck full of cloves and covered thick with a paste of brown sugar and vinegar and it was basted with wine, and when you saw that ham on the table you just naturally wanted to live forever in a world that produced such glorious things as that.

And Grandpa Hornblower had a pigpen right down by the bank of the creek, and the hired man had to wade through mud ankle deep to get to the pen, and on hot summer mornings when people went to the postoffice after the mail, they used to look at each other and say:

"Kind of close and sultry, isn't it," and they always looked down toward Grandpa Hornblower's place and we all knew what they meant.

Grandpa Hornblower knew, too, but he didn't mind a bit.

He said mud was good for hogs, and so were big ears of corn and big buckets of potato peelings, the more [illegible] the food was, the better the pork.

So Grandpa Hornblower always said, though he didn't use exactly these very words.

And we all believed him.

"Didn't Grandpa Hornblower raise the 'hawgs' himself and cure them himself, and weren't they better than anything on earth to eat—well, then."

And now the United States Department of Agriculture says Grandpa Hornblower was wrong from start to finish.

The department insists that hogs ought to be kept in clean sties with cement floors, and cement troughs of running water and every hog ought to be scrubbed with soap and water from head to foot every once so often.

The next thing we'll be hearing that stump water won't cure warts and that hairs from a horse's tail will not turn into snakes, no matter how long you leave them in the horse trough.

No wonder nobody wants to believe anything these days.

New Beauty in Thinner Hair Bob

By MISS HUDDLESTON.

I'M GOING to tell you about one of my recent experiences in search of beauty. Yes, even beauty experts not only are interested professionally, but trudge along, in the long procession of women in quest of beauty!

Josephine Huddleston

My most recent experience in beauty has to do with the whimsies of permanent waving, one of the most fascinating, beautifying and surprising branches of beauty culture.

I have a particular pet permanent wave that I favor mostly because it gives a loose, flat, natural appearing wave. The structure of my hair is especially suited to this method, and so, permanent after permanent there has been rejoicing in camp after each new wave. The last one, though, was a complete wash-out, to the consternation and grief of all concerned! You know, it is rather tragic in professional beauty circles when something goes wrong with a treatment given to your beauty writer, even though we all know that there is no hard and fast rule by which perfection can be guaranteed each time.

Then it turned hot . . . burning hot. Too hot to even think of oil treatments and waves or even beauty. It got so hot that in desperation, I bid farewell to my long bob! In the shearing that disposed of the longish hair much thinning was done.

And then I had the loveliest wave in my hair that you ever did see! One that by merely wetting the hair and pushing it up a bit produced the most natural appearing wave!

I'm perfectly satisfied with my hair for the Summer months, and those of you who are wearing your hair short now will do well to follow the method I did. If you are going to carry on with your long bob, however, be sure that you have a tighter winding than that formerly found satisfactory if you are permanent-wave minded.

Make Husband Help, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am 22 years old and my husband 25. We have a daughter who has been ill for three years. I know I could never love anyone else as much as I love him, but we can't seem to get along. We have separated quite a number of times but he always comes back.

He likes to go out and I know he goes with other girls. This he has admitted when we were separated. But I think he goes with them now every chance he gets.

He thinks a lot of his mother. If she tells him not to come back to me, he generally does not.

It's hard for me to get a position as the baby gets ill so often. I have to be with her.

I can't stand him going out as it hurts me so. FLORENCE.

Dear Florence—Your problem seems very real trouble to me and, as the fate of a sick child hinges on your plans, can't you persuade your husband into sharing the responsibility about the baby and get a little more co-operation from him? I'd even try to enlist the mother-in-law's help for the child's sake. Do write me again in more detail.

Objects to Her Kissing

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am engaged to a young lady and she still keeps on kissing her old friends when she meets them. Is this proper or not? Personally I do not like it. I thought I would write to you and find out before speaking to her about it.

DOWNHEARTED.

Dear Downhearted: No decidedly it isn't proper. The young lady may be doing it for fun or to tease you, but it seems in rather poor taste, especially when you do not like it.

Don't Force the Issue

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

A friend of mine met a young man recently and seems to care a great deal for him. He made a date with her and, for business reasons, could only spend a short while with her. On leaving he made another date, but failed to keep it and she has not heard from him since. She saw him at the beach, and he spoke to her and passed right by. Would it be proper for her to call him and find out why he didn't call, or should she let the matter drop?

WORRIED.

Dear Worried: It seems to me a mistake to force the issue when a young man acts like that. The world is full of interesting young men. I hope you will try and forget this one and find another friend who has better [illegible]

GRAND HOTEL

—By VICKI BAUM—

"WHY DO YOU take him around, then?" asked Flamm.

"I want something out of him."

"Oh, I see," said Flammchen, quickly understanding.

"You must dance with him later on," said Gaigern, drawing her a little closer.

"There's no 'must' about it."

"No. But I'm going to beg you to as nicely as I know how. He can't dance, you know, but he wants to so much. Just walk him about a bit along the wall . . . to please me."

"Well—I'll see," Flammchen agreed. He was so handsome with that mouth of his and with the scar above his chin and his slightly oblique eyes. She was a little in love with him.

This was the moment when Preysing's searching eyes picked her up at last. With reproachful and keen impatience he waited till the long dance came to an end, and then he proceeded to fight his way to the table where Flammchen had taken a seat between two men, both of whom Preysing already knew by sight.

"Good-evening, Fraulein Flamm," said the general director in his dry voice which embarrassment made even more unamiable; and then he planted himself beside her chair and hollowed his back to let the waiters get past. Flamm the Second screwed up her eyes in the effort to focus this unexpected apparition.

"Oh—the Herr Direktor," she said amiably when she had done so. "Are you dancing, too?"

She gazed from one to the other of the three icy faces. She was used to this expression in her male companions. "Do you know each other?" she asked with an elegant wave of the hand which she had picked up from a film star. She could not proceed to introductions for she did not known her cavaliers' names. Preysing and Gaigern muttered something, and Preysing rested one hand on the table with the air of taking possession.

"Good afternoon, Herr Preysing," said Kringelein, all of a sudden, without stirring from his seat. Each single one of his vertebrae ached from the fearful exertion it cost him not to tremble and collapse into the pitiful Kringelein of the counting house. He held his shoulders rigid, his lips and teeth, too, and even his nostrils, and these in consequence dilated with a malicious and equine expression. But he sustained himself on the height of this great moment; his will power tapped undreamed sources of strength in his well-cut black jacket, his linen, his tie, and his manicured fingernails. What certainly went very near to throwing him off his balance was the fact that Preysing, too, was altered. He still wore his well-known Fredersdorf suit, but he had no longer a mustache.

"I am not sure—pardon me—have we met before?" Preysing asked as politely as his intense preoccupation over Flammchen allowed.

"To be sure, I'm Kringelein," said Kringelein. "I am in the works."

"I see," said Preysing more coolly. "Kringelein, Kringelein. One of our representatives, are you?" he added with a glance at Kringelein's smart attire.

"No. Bookkeeper. Junior bookkeeper in the counting house. Room 23, Block C, Third floor," said Kringelein conscientiously, but without enthusiasm.

"I see" said Preysing again, and sank into reflection. He preferred to say no more for the present about the undesired and incomprehensible presence of a junior clerk from Fredersdorf in the Yellow Pavilion of the Grand Hotel. "I want to speak to you, Fraulein Flamm," he said, withdrawing his hand from the back of her chair. "It is about a new job of typing," he explained in his office tone, and this was particularly aimed at this fellow from Fredersdorf.

"Right," said Flammchen. "What time would suit you? Seven, half-past seven?"

"No. Immediately," Preysing said peremptorily.

"I am sorry, I can't immediately," said Flammchen amiably. "I am engaged—as you see. I cannot very well desert these gentlemen. I have promised Herr Kringelein a dance."

"Herr Kringelein will be so good as to forego it," said Preysing stiffly. It was a command. Kringelein could feel his rigid lips expanding to the obsequious smile of twenty-five years of subordination. He forced it back. He appealed for help and strength to Gaigern. The Baron had a cigarette in the corner of his mouth. The smoke ascended past the eyelashes of his left eye and he screwed up this eye with a roguish and knowing wink.

"I have no intention of foregoing it," said Kringelein. No sooner had he got it out than he stiffened like a hare squatting in a furrow. Suddenly this obstinate demeanor on Kringelein's part brought his case to Preysing's recollection. He had had it before him only a few days before.

"That is remarkable, indeed," Preysing said with the dreaded nasal tone of the factory. "Very remarkable. Now I know where I am. You reported sick, isn't that so? Herr Kringelein, eh? Your wife is in receipt of support from the sick fund on account of your serious illness. We gave you six weeks' sick leave on full pay and here you are amusing yourself in Berlin. You are indulging in a style of living quite out of keeping with your position and your income. Remarkable, Herr Kringelein. Your books shall be very carefully examined. You may depend upon that. Your pay shall be stopped, since you are so well off, Herr Kringelein. You shall—"

"Now, children, don't quarrel here. Keep that for your office," said Flammchen with disarming good humor. "We are here to amuse ourselves. Come along, Herr Kringelein. We're going to dance now."

Serving Cake on Birthday

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

1. When having a birthday dinner in honor of a friend, and a regular birthday cake is being served with ice cream, how should it be served?

2. Would one serve the cake on a small plate with a dessert fork and ice cream in a sherbet with a small plate under it, or both on a small plate and a spoon and fork, or just the fork? It will be brick ice cream.

MRS. S.

1. Usually the birthday cake is festively brought in, candles lighted and looking very gay, just before the service of the ice cream. Then the birthday-ee blows out the candles, and cuts the first slices . . . often the whole of the cake, and serves it to plates that are placed at her place, or the place where the cake is placed.

2. The first is correct. The ice cream is served in an appropriate dish with a plate beneath it, and with its own ice cream spoon or tea spoon. The cake is served on a small dessert plate, with its own fork.

NATIONAL DOUBLES TOURNEY OPENS AT LONGWOOD

FANNING

—By GEORGE UNDERWOOD—

Young Stan Poreda. ↑ Pride of Flournoy
A Fistic Newcomer. Pal of Tex Rickard.
Rude to Schmeling. ↓ Battles Babe Hunt.

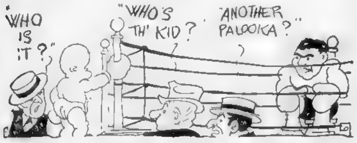
UNLESS EDDIE MACK IS SPOOFING

Max Schmeling was after a sucker, but landed a Tartar instead,
Poreda, the fresh Jersey youngster, did almost stand Max on his head.
But that was only in training and we'll see next Thursday night
If Flournoy's much touted scrapper sure really and truly can fight.

This Stanley Poreda, who is the latest one Eddie Mack has billed to box Babe Hunt at the reopening of the Arena—Walter Cobb was the first one Eddie broadcast would be in the opposite corner to Babe—is quite a scrapper. In fact, his manager, Frank Flournoy, Tex Rickard's old side kick, declares that Stan can take any or all of the Three Threats—Schaaf, Retzlaff and Hamas—the experts are raving about and stand them on their left eyebrows. We dunno, Frank! Wedunno!

From the look we had at Poreda he lacks just what puts Schaaf, Retzlaff and Hamas in the fistic spotlight the punch. He's a sweet boxer, a sharp hitter and a first-class ringman, is this Poreda, but unless he's dug up a haymaker since we saw him working with Max Schmeling in the En-Joie Health Camp at Endicott he lacks the TNT that is helping Schaaf, Retzlaff and Hamas dynamite their way up into the front ranks of the heavyweights.

We recollect Poreda's first appearance in the Schmeling training camp. The Black Uhlan, you know, then was training for the title tilt with our Sharkey man. Max had been getting new sparring partners daily and slapping 'em around something shamefully. Manager Joe Jacobs has the right idea that the proper training for a fighter is to fight, and anybody that put up his dukes against Schmeling at the Endicott training camp had to fight or jump over the ropes. Those that chose to fight generally wound up on the canvas for that Dutchman can hit. Don't let anyone tell you he can't



"WHO IS IT?"
"WHO'S TH' KID?"
"ANOTHER PALOOKA?"

Well, we gathered around the ringside that pleasant summer afternoon to see Der Maxie slap this young Poreda feller around. We all thought that the young Jerseyman would have to play the part of an animated punching bag, just like the rest of Schmeling's shock absorbers. None of us had heard of Poreda. No one else had. But the youngster scarcely had squared off against the Black Uhlan before he had us all setting up taking notice. To be sure, Max cuffed him But young Stan cuffed him right back. In three shakes of a lamb's tail there was a beautiful shindy—a perfectly lovely shindy.

Poreda's first poke on Schmeling's beak brought the glitter in the black, beady eyes of the Black Uhlan. Der Max called out the Landwehr, the Landsturm and all the other troops in an endeavor to wipe the young upstart off the map. Biff! Bang! Bing! All over the ring! It was a beautiful scrap while it lasted. Two rounds. And then Manager Jacobs signalled "Sufficient." Both boys had a bit of a mad on and wanted to continue. The spectators certainly were willing, too. But Schmeling was training to fight Sharkey, was not fighting Poreda and there was no money in the house, so there was nothing left for Yussel Jacobs but to stop the free show.

A couple of days later Poreda's brother or father showed up in camp. We don't recollect just which. But, anyway, we got the elder Poreda's ear and said: "You are making a mistake by allowing Poreda to continue getting slapped around by Schmeling. Stanley is too promising a youngster. Schmeling is liable to take all the fight out of him here in the training camp. Take him away and give him a chance to develop. He looks like the makings of a mighty good ring man."

The next thing we knew Frank Flournoy had Poreda signed to a contract and Frank has been bringing him along ever since. Old Frank has been sorta having troubles getting Poreda going rightly! Flournoy doesn't happen to be a racketeer and has no connection with the matchmaking and managerial cliques that are choking the old game. So it's been a little hard getting fights for Poreda. But Stanley has been coming along—he's been coming along.

If Poreda only could hit like Schaaf, Retzlaff and Hamas he would be right up front now, for the young Jerseyman has lots of ring class and plenty of boxing stuff. Stanley has to wear 'em down to get 'em. Steve, Ernie and Charlie blast 'em right pronto.

Frank Flournoy long was Tex Rickard's right hand man Frank was a cotton broker down South when he first met Rickard and tied up with him. Flournoy introduced Rickard to the money men who made Tex in New York. Later Flournoy gently was eased out of the picture. Rickard and the 600 Millionaires certainly didn't do right by Flournoy. In fact, they gave Frank the rawest of raw deals. But you never hear Flournoy mention it. All he'll talk about now is Poreda. On Stanley Poreda old Frank Flournoy stands or falls.

He made them what they are today and then got the "bum's rush,"
But ask him to retell the tale and he will answer "Hush"
Now that's all past and put behind, let's talk of my boy Stan,
Just tell the world for Frank Flournoy he's a first-class fighting man."

DEMPSEY VS. HARTWELL TONIGHT

Portland, Ore., Aug. 24 Jack Dempsey is headed once more for the top of the pugilistic heap.

His old confidence is back again with his return to the ring and the former heavyweight champion made no effort here today to conceal the seriousness of his [illegible] back campaign.

"How far are you going on your comeback?" he was asked. His reply snapped back.

"I consider Schmeling the best of the present crop of heavyweights," he continued, "and I'll be ready to meet him at the conclusion of this tour.

"That's why I'm barring no one. Its fighting I need to get into real form again and its fighting I intend to do in every bout.

"It's just like getting home to the back in the ring again. My wind and legs are good, but my judgment on distance is off. That will come back, however, in actual ring work."

[illegible] championship [illegible] here [illegible] on his arrival here and followed him throughout the day.

Tiger Jack Looks Great in Gym

A brief gymnasium appearance verified the fact that the Manassa Mauler was down for fighting weight and looking in fine trim.

Big Bill Hartwell 210 Boston Mass negro is slated to go the four rounds with the Mauler at the stadium here tonight.

"It's me or him," Dempsey said laconically when asked if he looked for a knockout. I'm out to defend myself. My future is at stake."

The advance seat sale indicated a crowd of 25,000 a testimonial that Dempsey's drawing ability is unimpaired, as boxing attendance here is usually 3000 or 4000

Exhibition bouts at Seattle and Spokane, Wash., and Vancouver, B C., will follow the Portland show, after which Dempsey will return to Reno for a Labor Day encounter

Queen Helen Starts Home With Crown

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 24 (US)—Five years of competition against the world's best without the loss of a single set. That is the record which Mrs. Helen Wills Moody completed when she won the national tennis championship, crushing Mrs. Eileen Whittingstall of England, 6 4, 6—1, at Forest Hills Stadium.

Since she lost to Suzanne Lenglen on the Riviera in 1926, Helen Wills Moody has not given a set to anyone She went through her six matches in the national tourney with the loss of only 23 games

Mrs. Moody returns to her home in Berkeley, Calif, the latter part of this week, playing two exhibitions en route. She will not compete in the national doubles championships Her tennis plans for next year likewise are indefinite, she said.

Heretofore triumphant as Miss Helen Wills, she won a place for the name of Mrs. Frederick W. Moody Jr, on a trophy that was put into competition last year for the first time—and carried off to England by Miss Betty Nuthall.

The title and trophy, both passed up by Mrs. Moody in 1930, returned to this country because of the champion's great game. Mrs. Whittingstall who gained her place in the final through a pair of astonishing upsets at the expense of Helen Jacobs and the defending champion, Betty Nuthall, fell as readily as the rest of Mrs. Moody's opponents

For one set, as the English girl attempted to carve out her fortunes at the net, there was a lingering doubt among the 4000 spectators as to whether Mrs Moody would rush past this new foe as easily as she passed the others But in the second set Eileen weakened, and the end came quickly

The first set lasted 24 minutes the second only 11. The high spot of the match was reached early as Mrs. Whittingstall won three games in succession to bring the count to 3-all and give Mrs Moody notice that this was not to be child's play.

Mrs. Moody accepted the challenge, applied pressure for the remainder of the engagement and demonstrated how one-sided she could make it by limiting the English girl to only 14 points in the second set

Mrs. Moody Takes Final Five Games

Mrs. Moody took the last five games in succession with a smashing attack that sent Mrs Whittingstall scurrying around the back court and made her an easy victim for trap shots [illegible] dropped over the net [illegible] [illegible] placement [illegible] the sides of the court [illegible] Eileen was located

Mostly however [illegible] racquet forcing Eileen [illegible] that decided the points

Helen scored 39 points altogether, and 41 were made on erring shots by her foe from overseas.

It was apparent early that Mrs Whittingstall would base her attack on a volleying game but she didn't have a chance to demonstrate until Mrs. Moody had won the first game with the aid of two service aces.

In the second game she commenced coming to the net but she was plainly nervous and double faulted twice to give Mrs. Moody a lead of 2—0 in games

Mrs. Whittingstall Nervous During Match

Though she lost the third game Mrs. Whittingstall's plan of action began to function then. The game went to deuce twice, but Eileen was still apparently nervous, and she was passed three times at the net without so much as raising her racquet in the neighborhood of the ball

Steadying then, she took three games in succession and squared the count with Mrs Moody at 3 all. Four successive errors by Mrs Moody cost her the fourth game at love

In the fifth game Eileen broke through Mrs Moody's service for the first time getting one critical point with a sharp angled volley and taking the game finally by passing Helen as the American girl started to rush the net for the first time

In the sixth game the affair took on all the semblance of a contest when Mrs Moody was on the run, attempting vainly to make recoveries Eileen won the game at 4 -1, finishing it off with a trap shot

Mrs Moody's attack became fiercer then Playing at her best in the remainder of the match she kept up that vicious and determined pace

Mrs. Moody had things all her own way in the second set.

The St. Louis Cardinal[illegible] fending, and, in all prob[illegible] coming National League pennant winners, ar[illegible] champions from top [illegible] of the lineup today.

If they have a single weakne[ss] it failed to make its appearance while they were taking both ends of a doubleheader from the Braves.

Magnificent [illegible] power[illegible] and timely batting, [illegible] and flawless fielding, blinding speed and supreme [illegible] the S[illegible] men displayed them all and a lot more while walking off with the opener contest by the ridiculous score of 16 to 1 and then out-lasting the [illegible] night cap, 1 to 0, in 11 innings.

Cards Lack Stars for Short Series Punch

That's [illegible] swer [illegible] formidable [illegible] four out of six games to the Macks in the last world's series but [illegible] standing performers as Grove, Earnshaw, Simmons and Cochrane and in a short engagement such as the fall classic, brilliant individual efforts can and often do overcome team strength and balance.

But you may set it down that if they were in the same loop as the A's, they would stand an even chance of winning out for the flag.

And [illegible] and [illegible] the Ma[illegible] be [illegible] time.

The home fan usually feels that his favorites have a chance again[st] the Cards and they prove him wrong in such a manner that he fails to realize it. They don't [illegible] class th[illegible]

Cards Likely to Stay Near Top for Years

When the A's go, they will be gone. The Cards aren't ever going back very far while they maintain their present farm system. When this team clinches the flag, it will be the Mound City's fourth National League championship in six years and of that outfit which won in '26, only Hafey, Haines, Bottomley and Rhem are st[ill] [illegible] there.

Most of the [illegible] cent products of the farms and there are plenty more where they came from waiting for the word to report and keep on winning pennants for the team.

It was the veteran, Chick Hafey, who did the most damage to the Braves in the opening Sunday tilt. He collected a home run with the bases full to give the Cards a four-run lead in the third and knocked several more runs in later with another circuit drive, a double and two singles.

In the second game, a farm product stole the glory, Paul Derringer, big right-handed pitcher picked from the Rochester orchard last winter, hung up his 14th victory of the season by blanking the Tribe with five hits.

The Cards will play the third of their current five-game series at the Tepee this p.m. Flint Rhem is likely to do the flinging against Harry "Socks" Seibold.

Conn. Open Golf Tourney on Today

New Haven, Ct., Aug. 24 (AP)—[The] cream of Connecticut golfers gathered here today for the first annual state open tournament. Cloudy skies from which came occasional rain drops made playing conditions far from ideal.

The first Connecticut open champion was to be crowned on the Yale course after 36 holes of play, 18 of which were to be played this morning and the other 18 this afternoon.

Leading the list of professionals was John Golden of Wee Burn. As state amateur champion, Charlie Clare of Race Brook was regarded as the favorite among the amateur ranks.

Cauliflower Chatter

Fight followers may choose between the pros and amateurs tonight. At Salem, the pros will have their innings with Horatio Velha of Gloucester clashing with Al Beaudett of Manchester, N. H., in the eight-round main go. Charley Parker of the South End will make his comeback to the ring boxing Frankie Herlihy of Lynn in the six-round semifinal.

Eddie Flaherty of Woburn, a classy battler, will show against Tony Costa of New Bedford and there will also be two other six-rounders.

At Quincy, the Fore River Club holds another of its amateur tournaments which have been drawing large gatherings. There will be boxing in the 112, 125, 135 pound classes, also the heavyweight division. The 112 and 135 pound classes are for novices, while the 126 and heavyweight class are open.

Matchmaker Jack Murphy of the Highland A. C., Campello, hopes for a crowded park on Thursday night with Ring Larsen of Quincy meeting Harry Allen of Brockton in the feature go of 10 rounds. This bout should be a slugfest.

The following preliminaries have been arranged for the Larsen-Allen battle: Mickey Bishop, Stoughton meets Charley Polcaro, Medford, Douglas McKinnon, Quincy, faces Henry Owens, Cambridge; Ike Ezmundt, Salem, clashes with Frank Cedahholm, Abington, and Paddy McFarland, U. S. navy, will punch away with Bud Mignault, Bridgewater.

Ernie Schaaf and Jack McCarthy, two fine young heavyweights, are in New York today. The pair are in action on Wednesday night at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn. Schaaf meets Campolo in the feature bout, while McCarthy meets Mickey Taylor of Jersey City in a six-rounder.

The Schaaf-Campolo battle which is being staged by the Dodger A. C., Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, will have a top price of $5.74, which includes tax and they will run as low as $1.05. That's giving the public a break for its money.

Fran Hersey Takes Kennebunkport Win

TWI RACE MAY END THIS WEEK

The Hub Twi League is likely to end its second half schedule this week unless the race is so close that the top teams must play out their full list of games to decide the position.

The Colored Tigers are sitting on the top, but they have some important games to get off their chest this week and start tonight at new Lincoln Park against Allston, the first half winners.

Allston will have the flashy colored team back at North Brighton tomorrow night.

The Tigers will entertain South Boston on Wednesday. Bill Benson's team is far from being a set-up as was proven when it beat Newton Upper Falls 3 to 1 yesterday, which hurt Newton's chances of getting into the playoffs.

Cambridge will tackle the Tigers at Thorndike Field either Friday or Saturday. As the Cantabs knocked off Waltham, the colored team will have to hustle to win at Cambridge. If necessary to get a game in with Waltham, the Tigers may take on the Watch City team on Saturday.

Newton Upper Falls has finished with the exception of two home games, against Somerville on Friday and Cambridge on Sunday. Somerville, still in the running, entertains Chelsea at Lincoln Park tomorrow night and goes to Waltham on Wednesday and if it still has a chance it will play Chelsea again on Saturday.

THE DAILY DOZEN

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

Jack Dempsey, in discussing freak boxing laws recently, pointed out two typical examples of how Americans, probably in keeping with the great national hypocrisy of prohibition, get around the laws regarding prize fights.

In Virginia, the law permits wrestling, but not boxing. So, promoters wishing to hold bouts, advertise a "wrestling show." One wrestling bout is actually put on, and then "exhibition boxing bouts" are given "free."

Of course, if some of the boxing bouts are like many we have seen, the Virginians are violating no law. Only an expert could tell the difference between wrestling and boxing.

Up in Maine, no bout is allowed to go over six rounds. So, when promoters wish to stage a ten round bout, the principals first fight six rounds, rest for five minutes, and then the same pair fight another four round bout. Without disguises either. And we used to think those boys in Maine were hicks!

These freak laws are not the only ones. Some states have laws permitting boxing, but you could never prove it by the natives.

Reminds us of the story Damon Runyon once told of a fight between Young Stribling and some fighter whose name doesn't matter. Stribling fought his usual battle, holding on for the greatest part of the bout. Willie's rival got the decision, and everyone in Madison Square Garden cheered—all expect two bewildered men. When the applause died down, the two men arose, and gave Stribling a big hand. It turned out that they were a couple of foreigners, and thought it was a wrestling match.

Friends of Jim Flynn, only man to knock out Jack Dempsey, thinking to do him an honor and perhaps raise a purse for him, held a benefit boxing show recently. When the gate was counted, it was discovered that the expenses were 25 cents greater than the receipts. Jim has still faith and hope left. They don't cost as much as charity.

Free speech has been suspended in the American League. It cost five players $5 apiece for talking to persons in the stands. How about umpires, Mr. Harridge? Ain't they people?

The Cardinals may abandon their Danville, Ill., farm because of lack of patronage at night games there. Even with the brightest lights, it's pretty hard for fans to see night baseball.

Here's good news for bald headed men. Burleigh Grimes, Cardinal hurler, says he grows a beard to keep the sun out of his eyes. He must pitch standing on his ear.

Joe O'Donnell, premier hurler of the Boston Typo nine, is known as the Grover Cleveland Alexander of the outfit. No enemy batsman can hit Joe's curves. They all go over the grandstand.

Why do bachelors in Philadelphia have a "barge" club? Is there any need for it?

Mrs. Tyson Defends Western Golf Title

Chicago, Aug. 24 (AP)—Mrs. George W. Tyson of Kansas City, the defending champion, today headed a band of 180 or more women golfers over the Exmoor Country Club course in quest of the women's Western title.

The field included the best in the Middle West and Far West, along with a sizable number from the East and South, and competition promised to be as tough as usual. Included in the list were four former title-holders: Mrs. S. L. Reinhardt of Chicago, Mrs. Melvin Jones of Chicago, Mrs. Leona Pressler of Los Angeles and Mrs. O. S. Hill of Kansas City.

Other strong contenders included Virginia Van Wie, Chicago; Peggy Wattles of Buffalo, N. Y.; Bernice Wall, Oshkosh, Wis.; Mrs. Charles Dennehy of Chicago, the former Virginia Wilson; Mrs. Austin Pardue of Chicago and Mrs. Lee Mida of Chicago.

The low 32 scores will qualify for the match play struggles which open tomorrow. All match play will be at 18 holes, except the finals Saturday, which will be at 36 holes.

Milt Gaston is the Red Sox hope to break a four-game losing streak when they tackle the Indians in the second of a four-game engagement in Cleveland this afternoon. Willis Hudlin is the Forest City mound nominee.

Danny McFayden, with four wins in a row to his credit, tried to pilot the Fenway flock back onto victory trail in the opening game but lost out in the ninth, 4 to 3.

Earl Webb, who is hitting again, gave the Sox a two-run lead when he hit a homer off George Connally with one on in the third, but the Peckmen tied the count in the sixth and then put three singles together for their winning marker in the final frame. Webby's circuit clout was his 13th of the campaign.

"Lefty" Grove will set no new American League record for consecutive victories this season.

After capturing 16 verdicts in a row to tie the mark established by Walter Johnson and Joe Wood in 1912, the A's southpaw ace was beaten 1 to 0 by the Browns.

Dick Coffman, who recently hurled a one-hit game, blanked the champions with three safeties while his mates were collecting seven off Grove. It was the star portsider's third defeat in 28 starts this year.

Both the Sox and Braves were very fortunate in defeat on the Sabbath. The former gained undisputed posession of sixth place as the White Sox lost a doubleheader and fell into a cellar tie with the Tigers, who were nosed out by the Yanks, and the latter lost no ground in their fight to hold fifth place as the Pirates were twice tripped up by the Robins.

Babe Ruth went two up in the race for the home run crown when he smashed out his 38th circuit drive of the season in the opener of the Yanks-White Sox doubleheader.

The Giants were rained out of a twin-bill with the Cubs in New York, and lost a full game to the Cards, who are now leading the National League parade by 8½ games.

It is now impossible for any second division club in the American League to win the flag. The fifth-place Browns are 35½ games back of the A's, and have only 35 more games to play. The last-place Reds, 34½ games back with only 33 to play are the only National League clubs that haven't a mathematical chance of beating out the Cards.

President John Heydler of the National League was an interested spectator at the Sunday doubleheader at the Wigwam. He is making his season's final tour of the circuit.

FIRST CALL TO FOOTBALL ARMS SOON

New York, Aug. 24 (AP)—It will be some time before the frost is on the pumpkin and the raccoon skin coat is on the collegiate back. All along the Atlantic seaboard this week, nevertheless, the first call to football arms will be sounded.

One week from today, the first Fall drills will begin for a group including Carnegie, Temple and Geneva. The following day, Sept. 1, will find the squads of Fordham, West Point, Georgetown, Rutgers, Columbia and Cornell University answering the first call to preliminary drills. From then on, the activity rapidly will become widespread on eastern gridirons until the forces of Yale, Harvard and Princeton start workouts Sept. 15.

Although another profitable gridiron season generally is expected, eastern colleges and universities have adopted sharply defined programs of financial retrenchment. This is indicated clearly by the reports of 71 institutions to the Associated Press.

Syracuse and the College of the City of New York have abandoned training camps. Syracuse also has shortend its Fall practice period, as has the University of Pittsburgh and Geneva College.

100 Are Expected to Report at B. U.

Varsity squads have been cut, although the opportunity for others to play football is not restricted. The average size of the squads expected to report within the next few weeks is 50 players. They range in size from 25 at Vermont, Loyola of Maryland and West Liberty (W. Va.) to 100 at Boston University and 110 at Yale.

A few of the smaller colleges have reduced the number of games scheduled and in the case of Waynesburg (Pa.) have decided against making any "extravagant trips." The average number of games scheduled, however, is more than eight per college. Ten-game schedules are listed for Brown, Navy, Duquesne, which reports an "expansion" program, West Virginia, Georgetown, West Virginia Wesleyan, Baltimore, University of Maryland, and Morris Harvey (W. Va.).

18 Eastern Teams to Play Night Games

Night football, first introduced in the Middle-West and South, will be played by no less than 18 Eastern College. Morris Harvey, for economic reasons, has scheduled seven night contests and Duquesne six, using Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, as its home grounds. Geneva has scheduled five games under the lights. Washington & Jefferson, Temple, Georgetown, Bucknell and Catholic University have listed at lease one evening performance.

Although 90 per cent of the Eastern institution reported no change in policies or organization, beyond economy measures, stronger faculty control of sports programs will be manifest generally with the new college year. At Syracuse, Pennsylvania and Union, athletics have been put on a new basis with coaches, in most cases, given a faculty rating. Vermont is putting into practice its plan of an "all small college" schedule, for the first time, as a gesture toward keeping colleges in their own class of competition.

Con O'Kelly Meets Griffiths Tonight

Chicago, Aug. 24 (AP)—Tuffy Griffiths of Sioux City, Ia., will make his second start since impaired vision forced a long layoff tonight in a 10-round bout with Con O'Kelly, Boston Irish heavyweight, at White City.

O'Kelly has boxed impressively in training and will outweigh the tough one, but Griffiths is a good sized favorite. In his last start Griffiths gave Paul Pantaleo, Chicago youngster, a fancy beating. O'Kelly, who is Irish-born, will be making his first start in the midwest.

Ouimet, Bemis Top Shaw and Weidig

Francis Ouimet and Commander H. M. Bemis, United States Navy, downed Shaw and Walter Weidig 4 and 3, at the Woodland C. C. yesterday.

Ouimet's score of 70 was one under par.

Yesterday's Stars

By The Associated Press

Dick Coffman, Browns, and Waite Hoyt, Athletics—Former held A's to three hits to beat Grove 1-0 in first game of doubleheader; latter gave four hits to take second 10-0.

Chick Hafey and Paul Derringer, Cardinals—Hafey batted in eight runs, hitting two homers, as Cards beat Braves 16-1 in first game. Derringer gave five hits in eleven innings as Jim Bottomley's homer won second 1-0.

Dick Montague, Indians—Singled in ninth to drive in run that beat Red Sox 4-3.

Babe Ruth, Yankees—Hit 38th home run of season as Yanks won two from White Sox.

Joe Shaute and Jack Quinn, Robins—Former pitched Robins to 5-4 victory over Pittsburgh in first game, latter's relief pitching checked Pirates and enabled Brooklyn to win again.

The 300 meters medley and the 440 meters are the championships for women.

Claire Walker of the Whitin C. A. and Millicent Cramp of the same club are the leading entrants in the medley swim.

In the New England junior 440 freestyle Madeline Smart and Erma Bell of the Whitin C. A. are entered.

Barbara Norris in 220-Yard Breaststroke

In the women's open events Barbara Norris of Worcester, Judith Fowler of Spencer, Margret Lynch and Mary Kelliher of the Whitin C. A. are among the leading entrants in the 220 yard breaststroke.

In the 100 meters free-style handicap open Barbara Greenwood, Mildred Toomey, Mary M. Doherty, Jones will be the leading contenders.

Claire Walker and Gussie Schnabel of the B. S. A. have entered in the 440 freestyle handicap event.

The men's events on the program are the New England junior 440 breaststroke, New England junior 220 backstroke, 100 meters breaststroke handicap and 100 meters freestyle handicap.

Todd, Snyder Seek Diving Championship

William Todd, Paul Snyder, Quentin McCaffery and Elmer Larson of the B. S. A. are seeking the diving crown.

John Stanas of the Whitin C. A. will be out to annex the 100 meters freestyle crown.

William Rendell of the B. S. A. is the leading aspirant for the 440-yard breaststroke title. His teammate William Champion may capture the backstroke title.

HOLMY WINS 12 MILE RACE

John Holmy of the B. A. A. was first in the 12 mile race at Mattapan Park, sponsored by Roma Lodge, Sons of Italy.

A novel system of handicapping was adopted by which all the runners were started together and the handicaps were deducted when they finished.

Jimmy Henigan, the scratch man, finished second on actual time and might have won but for an accident on the second lap when he lost a shoe. He finished one minute and six seconds behind Holmy.

Boys' Net Champ May Turn Pro

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug 23 (AP)—The Milwaukee Sentinel said tonight that Frankie Parker, Milwaukee 15-year-old national boys' tennis champion, may forsake amateur ranks and join William T. Tilden's group of touring professionals.

Parker, the newspaper said, was expected to decide before returning here from a tournament at Newport, R. I., whether he will accept an offer of $400 a month and expenses to join Tilden and Karel Kozeluh on their present tour.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

Newer golfers and a lot of case-hardened old bunker-jumpers, too, find it next to impossible to slow down the back swing. There's no question about it, you must get that back swing in slow and rhythmic order if your golf is to improve. Various ways of "counting" the back swing have been devised, but the player finds this disturbing and ineffective. One reason it fails to work is because counting takes your mind off the ball and puts it on your club. So when you play the ball forget counting, but in practice in might develop a slow and rhythmic action by counting four or five instead of the customary one-two-three. The four or five count may serve you better as a slowing-down device merely for the reason that it takes longer to count five, hence your action is compelled to a slower pace. Some such device as this would serve to give you the feel of the action.

USE COUNT SYSTEM IN PRACTICE, BUT FORGET ABOUT IT IN ACTUAL PLAY.

68 BY BLANEY AT BRAE BURN

W. C. "Bil" Blaney, ex New England champion, set a new Brae Burn C. C. record, when he shot a 68, seven strokes under par, for the course.

On the outward nine, he was twice over par, but birdies on the fifth and ninth gave him a 36.

He had birdies on the 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th and 16th holes, an eagle on the 17th and par on the other three to clip seven strokes from par.

Blaney was playing with Dr. G. W. Mansfield, W. H. Rice, Jr., and R. M. Pitts, Jr.

178 TO 10 SHOT 1ST IN FRANCE

(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Deauville, France, Aug. 24—America scored an unprecedented sweep on Deauville's greatest day of the fashionable season here. Horse owners from over the sea carried off the $20,000 Grand Prix De Deauville and two other races at the beautiful seaside track.

Ralph Beaver Strassburger's Celerina, a rank outsider, galloped in a neck and neck winner of the Grand Prix, generously rewarding his backers with 178 francs for 10.

James E. Widener's Confidence took second place by a hair's breadth, while James Schwob's too heavy favorite Bruledor was third a full length behind. J. J. McKeon's Massinette opened the series of American triumphs, capturing the [illegible] race, the Prix De La Premiere from the favorite, while William Littauer's Papillon Rose continued the pace, snatching victory in the Prix De Lessard.

Aga Khan's Daiya Awurd broke the spell by taking one of the night caps with A. K. Macomber's Pra[illegible] among the also rans.

Football Explained

By M. T. McSWEENEY

The approach of the football season naturally brings thousands of queries regarding the game. But not to us. Therefore, we will devote today's column to answering a few of the more interesting questions.

Q.—Can you tell me how to organize a football team?

A.—Yes.

Q.—The ball is on the two-yard line, fourth down. It's the last period, two seconds to go. What is the proper play?

A.—By all means.

Q.—If a player signals for a fair catch, and he is tackled before the whistle blows, what is the penalty?

A.—Half the distance of the whistle.

Q.—Ball carrier is tackled, thrown off side, kicked in face and strangled. What is the penalty?

A.—Defensive team loses the round on a foul.

Q.—Was that you under the stands at the last Harvard-Yale game?

A.—I refuse to answer on the grounds that it would tend to incriminate and degrade me.

CURB MARKET CHANGES ARE NARROW

New York, Aug. 24.—The curb market was hesitant today. A lower tendency developed during the morning, but changes were largely limited to minor fractions, and by midday a steadier tone was manifest. Trading was small.

The oil shares were little influenced by the news that one company was finally offering $1 a barrel for crude oil in Oklahoma, objective of Governor Murray's shut down.

Gulf fluctuated uncertainly, selling off a fraction, then rallying to sell a little higher. Cities Service, which through its subsidiary, Indiana Territory, holds important oil properties in Oklahoma, sagged half a point, then recovered a little.

The political crisis in England had little influence on shares of companies incorporated in Great Britain. Ford, Ltd., was a little higher, while Woolworth, Ltd., ruled about steady. Ford of Canada, however, was a soft spot.

Electric Bond & Share sold off fractionally and Middle West Utilities yielded a minor fraction. American & Foreign Power warrants were under some pressure. American Gas & Electric was steady. Appalachian Gas, recent pool favorite, was little influenced by news of acquisition of the Empire Corp.

Grains Are Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Grains finished lower today. Wheat closed weak [illegible] cents lower, corn [illegible] off, oats ⅛-¼ down and provisions showed 8 to 20 cents loss.

—SPECTATOR—Says:

See-sawing irregularly, for a ten-day period, through a narrow price range, the stock market at the close of last week stood at precisely the same level as on Wednesday, August 12. On that day an advance in the general list was started, and the average of 90 representative stocks moved ahead 5 points, reaching the peak Saturday, August 15. Last week's downturn erased all of this rally.

Heavily Oversold

Characterizing all this as a "frankly technical movement," one of the well-known brokerage houses attempts to weigh the factors at work in the stock market at the present time. The strength of the market, it points out, lies in the fact that it has been heavily oversold, that there are two years of depression in the background and that a seasonal improvement of some sort or other should become evident in certain trades.

On the other side of the picture is the claim that many stocks are still overpriced, that dividends [illegible] outlook is [illegible] uncertain at best and "foreign conditions frankly bad."

Selections

In the firm belief that the [illegible] industry [illegible] will be governed by "fundamentals" rather than professional stock market effort, a leading authority suggests conservative selection of stocks like the following: Consolidated Gas, Standard Oil of California, Standard of New Jersey, Woolworth, Public Service of New Jersey, Drug, Inc., R. J. Reynolds and Montgomery Ward.

This group is not included in the market's fastest movers, though speculative interest in the groups they represent has been increasing of late. Many "semi-investment opportunities are, in its opinion, being uncovered by the recent decline in the bond market.

Here and There

The amusements stocks have been going fairly good on account of themselves as a group. There is said to have been a good deal of pool buying in Standard Brands . . . The gossip mills are working overtime and all sorts of stories and rumors are going around. About 98 per cent of this sounds like pure bunk . . . There is a growing bullishness on wheat, augmented by the fact the Farm Board holdings will be cut down substantially soon . . . The market's going to have trouble going up unless there is a release in pressure on certain groups, especially the motors and rails.

Rubber Is Irregular

New York, Aug. 24—Rubber futures today were irregular. September, 4.90; December, 5.10. New contracts—September, 4.98; December, 5.18; March, 5.40.

BROKERS ARE CAUTIOUS IN ADVICES

By FRANK H. MELOON

Brokers continue cautious about advising speculative purchases, although long-pull investment buying is favored by many on recessions. The cautionary note seen in most market letters is largely inspired by the evident inclination of those responsible for bullish leadership to step aside on every danger signal emanating from bearish sources. More courageous leadership is needed to give the market a steady upward impetus. This awaits some definite news of cheerful import from a major industry.

One curious effect of the 1929 stock market crash has been to aid life insurance companies. President Thomas I. Parkinson of the Equitable Life, former college professor drafted into the ranks of finance and industry, cites an example by showing that his company's annuity business for the first seven months of this year shows a 100 per cent increase over the amount written in the same period of last year.

Harvard Economic Society is not among those who declare that improvement in the next two months will be only seasonal or less. It says:

"If conditions in Europe, and especially Central Europe, presently improve, we may expect a seasonal upturn of business approximating or even exceeding the full seasonal amount, which would mark the beginning of recovery from business depression."

Stiffening of commodity prices is generally regarded as a necessary prelude to general betterment. The Harvard society finds commodity prices have again shown signs of stabilization. It declares:

"Since the first of August, with the reopening of the German banks and relaxation of pressure upon sterling exchange, the European situation has taken a turn for the better.

"In this country such data as are available for the first two weeks of August indicate some quickening of activity in lines affected by the autumn seasonal movement."

American Tobacco was sold by some bears on fantastic rumors of a cut in cigarette prices. Sales of this company's cigarettes for the last reported month showed an increase. Cigarette makers see no reason for reducing prices. At the present level the government receives 6 cents for each package of 20 cigarettes, while the manufacturer gets 6.1 cents out of which to pay for tobacco, cigarette papers and wrapping, manufacturing and distributing expense, including freight and profit.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Downward movement which started last Thursday was resumed at the opening today, but was checked before getting far. The British cabinet upheaval was variously interpreted as a market influence by traders and caused more mystification than anything else. Political troubles in Great Britain had been foreseen and forecasted, and therefore could cause no great surprise to the street as a whole.

Oils Benefited by Week-End Advance

A sharp week-end rise in crude oil and gasoline in some sections of the country was reflected today in the firming up of Standard and independent oil shares. Socony-Vacuum was in good call around 19½ and Standard of California at 40½.

Oil Inquiry Likely to Be Favorable

Consensus of opinion in the Street is that the Government inquiry into the proposed merger of Standards of California and New Jersey is likely to be favorable. This is based on the fact that the Government withdrew opposition to the Socony-Vacuum merger and also to the likelihood that the vast legal talent of the big oils is unlikely to have turned out a product that would invite real federal opposition.

Gen. Motors Sold by Bear Traders

General Motors was again sold by bear traders today and went to a new low for the past two months on rumors of a possible reduction in the dividend to a $2.50 basis. [illegible] Motors [illegible] in the [illegible] quarter of 1931 was the highest since corresponding period of 1928, the year of its largest earnings. This was in face of the lowest dollar volume of sales for the quarter in five years.

Stores' Stocks Display Firmness

Early selling today brought recessions of only around a point in stores' stocks, such as the old favorites, First National, Safeway, Kroger, Macy and Woolworth. Firmness was soon shown.

Bohn Reported as Making Discovery

Bohn Aluminum report had it that there was quiet accumulation in the stock based on further developments in the commercial use of aluminum as a metal. The company has been experimenting, along with Dow Chemical Co., on additional uses for the commodity. Another rumor was that Bohn had discovered a new magnesium alloy and has been perfecting a method of die casting which will make possible its more extensive use. The company showed $2.62 a share in the first half compared with annual dividends of $1.50 a share. Current earnings are somewhat below those of preceding months.

Lambert's Sales in Month Larger

Evidence of more interest in Lambert has been seen recently, and there are statements in some quarters that a new group has started operating in the stock, although the identity has not been disclosed. Sales of the company in July are known to have shown a slight increase over the same month last year, and this is likely to be emphasized if there is to be an active pool operation in the issue in the near future.

Dividend Meeting of New Haven Is Near

Much interest is being shown in the dividend meeting of New Haven directors which is likely to be held Wednesday. Wall Street is looking for a reduction from the current $6 a share annual rate. This is indicated by the low price of the stock which would give a yield of considerably more than 10 per cent if the present rate were to be maintained.

New Haven Doing Better Than Others

Although New Haven has been doing better than many other railroads, the earnings have not been covering the distribution. One factor is that the road is getting less income on its Boston & Maine holdings. A reduction in New Haven's distribution and the cut already made by Boston & Maine will affect the income of Pennsylvania to a moderate extent because of its holdings in the two railroads.

Grain Trade Looks for Price Advances

Seventy-one per cent of grain trade believes prices of wheat should advance in next two or three months, according to New York Produce Exchange questionnaire answers; 29 per cent believes prices should remain steady; 67 per cent believes trend of feed grains, corn, oats and barley should be upwards.

Oil Declines Aid Western Railroads

Decline in oil prices has meant savings of $19,174,000 to Southern Pacific and Santa Fe railroads on fuel costs in five years to 1930, survey of Wood, Struthers & Co. indicates. This is something the market appears not to have taken into account, unless it did so during the so-called "Coolidge prosperity era."

TRADING DULL IN BOSTON MARKET

New lows were made on the Boston Stock Exchange today with trading extremely dull. Rails showed weakness with Boston & Albany down 3⅞ and Atchison off 1⅛. Pennsylvania recovered fractionally after making a new low mark in the morning session.

Kreuger & Toll off 1⅛ and Waltham Watch preferred off 3½ both made new lows for the year. American Telephone slumped 1⅛ and Torrington declined ¾.

Fractional losses were made by New England Telephone, Boston Elevated and General Electric. United Fruit was unchanged from its previous close.

United Shoe and Eastern Gas & Fuel prior preferred went against the trend and each gained ½. First National was up fractionally.

American Agricultural Co. of Delaware and subsidiaries reported for the fiscal year ended June 30, including business of the Connecticut Company up to the time it was taken over, net loss of $782,172.

This is the first annual report since the company took over the business of its predecessor company in accordance with the plan of [illegible] readjustment.

ADVERTISING IS EXTENDED

More than half of the 61 largest food manufacturing companies in the United States reported they have increased their expenditures for advertising and sales promotion during 1931 in a survey conducted by the Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America, according to Clarence Francis, president of the Association and vice-president of General Foods Corporation. Despite the business depression, only five companies announced that they are spending less than they did in 1930.

The survey, Mr. Francis stated, shows that employment is almost normal today in the food manufacturing industry. He said:

"This means that the stability of this industry unquestionably has done much to lessen the impact of the business depression, inasmuch as food represents approximately one-fourth of the total expenditure of this country and inasmuch as the food industry represents millions of employees."

Hears:

That the market is willing and ready to go ahead, but it will not do the usual discounting of expected business betterment. Elements which proved upsetting, toward the close of last week, can be watched in the meantime, as it will be a week or ten days before the reports on fall business are heard.

Reverse Opinion

Prophets of disaster are more numerous now than at any time since the late 1929. They are likened to the crowd who were so sure prosperity would be with us forever early in the same year. The few who advised caution then are now saying the outlook is definitely better and warn against selling short for a few dangerous points.

Drug looks and acts like a depression-proof stock. Earnings are at a record pace, while marketwise it defies the most determined onslaughts of the bears. It is said to still occupy a place in the holdings of a former bear leader.

Favor Specialties

Outright investors are being urged to stay away from the leaders except on sharp setbacks, by many brokers, who recommend they stick to the specialties. It is felt the leaders will have to bear the brunt of the bear thrusts. At the same time nimble traders should be able to make many quick turns in the former stocks.

Many who keep close watch on the ticker think the tape action of New Haven is hinting rather strongly at a cut in the dividend. Selling at 55 and paying $4, the shares would yield 6 per cent and will no doubt attract far-seeing buyers who still think the rails have some hope.

Montgomery Ward

There have been many examples by brokers showing the excesses to which liquidation has gone, but few are as startling as Montgomery-Ward. In 1928-29 the company raised $97,000,000 via subscription to new stock. This represents $21 a share, the approximate market price, offering investors a chance to acquire the company for the new money alone.

While it is not very reassuring to holders of coffee shares to hear the farm board has an interest in the coffee business, there is no reason to throw their equities overboard. After all, the huge stocks of coffee at foreign ports have been overhanging the market for some time now.

STOCKS LOWER, WITH SPOTTY RALLYING

New York, Aug. 24—Stocks were generally worked moderately lower in Wall st. today with spotty rallying tendencies shown from time to time.

The best recoveries were staged in the middle of the afternoon. Trading was dull, with considerable resistance displayed to selling by the majority of issues.

SALES UNDER MILLION

McKeesport Tin Plate weakened in the last hour, losing about 3 points. Losses of 1 to 2 at the same time appeared in U. S. Steel, National Biscuit, American Telephone, Woolworth, International Harvester, New York Central, Southern Pacific and American Tobacco. B. Sales were less than a million.

The budget crisis in England provided an unsettled background for trading.

The necessity of a dramatic house cleaning in British governmental finances had been apparent since the publication of the report of the Government economy committee, headed by Sir George May early in the month.

Despite the adverse psychological effects of the fall of the labor cabinet, high banking quarters in Wall Street circles were inclined to view optimistically the prospect of formation of a coalition government to deal with the situation.

The only element of surprise in the British situation was the news that the $250,000,000 Franco-American credit to the Bank of England., extended three weeks ago, had been virtually exhausted in supporting sterling exchange.

This was in substance coinformed in Wall Street international banking circles, although last week it had been generally understood in the financial community that only a minor fraction of the American portion of the loan been used.

NO FURTHER CREDITS

It was stated in important banking quarters that the Bank of England had as yet requested no further credits here, although the opinion was expressed that a further credit could be arranged. It was acknowledged, however, that arrangement of such a credit would be facilitated by the balancing of the British budget.

The arrival in Canada of Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, has aroused considerable interest, and it is taken for granted that he will meet with important Wall Street bankers.

Many observers attach highest importance to the restoration of financial equanimity to Europe, holding it an essential of general economic recovery.

The Harvard Economic Service says today:

"If financial unsettlement continues in Europe, real business recovery here may be prevented and the present depression may be prolonged into a double depression resembling in many respects that of 1893-96. Business conditions in the United States will in the immediate future be influenced largely by European developments."

Corporate business news over the week-end failed to provide important clues. Unofficial third quarter earnings estimates are beginning to appear in Wall Street and are of a character to suggest further dividend reductions. Steel wage reductions are being widely forecast in financial quarters.

The $1 a barrel crude oil price objective of Governor Murray in Oklahoma has apparently been achieved much sooner than generally expected with the posting of such a price by at least one company. Oil securities, however, were quiet and little changed.

50 Leaders on Big Board Off in Week

New York, Aug. 24—The market value of 50 representative stocks listed on the New York Exchange at the close of the past week was $15,247,322,369, a decrease of $773,373,789, or approximately 5.07 per cent under the value of $16,202,686,158 at the close of the preceding week, according to a compilation by Paul H. Davis & Co.

This compares with $24,895,583,479, the value of the shares at the close of the corresponding week in 1930.

Construction Aids Equipment Trading

Expanding activity in the country's building field is exerting a favorable influence on electrical equipment trading, Electrical World reports. August is developing an unexpected strength, in Eastern equipment centers and the approach of September is being viewed more optimistically.

BANK ADVISES BUYING NOW

New York, Aug. 24—The application of surplus savings for purchase of things of permanent use is advised by Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank in a circular to its depositors. Pres. Bennett says:

"We are advising our 249,000 depositors—a number equal to the entire population of many important cities—to take advantage of the large profits earned on their saved-up dollars over the last two years, and to begin a wise program of buying with part of these profits.

"In our opinion, the millions of savings and thrift depositors in this country have it in their power to change the whole aspect of industrial and trade conditions. They are the backbone of this nation's stupendous buying power. The least we can do is to give our one quarter of a million of these buyers sound advice on handling the profits their dollars have earned."

Rail Bonds Swept to New Low Marks

New York, Aug. 24 (AP)—A renewed selling wave swept a number of railroad issues to new low levels today in the bond market. Foreign obligations were generally lower, following the crisis in British politics and public utility and industrial loans declined narrowly and irregularly.

MERGER OF OILS

N. H. T., Winchester—I have 200 shares of Sinclair. Kindly describe the proposed merger, which will, if consummated, affect my stock.

Ans.—Negotiations are under way for the consolidation of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corp., Prairie Oil & Gas Co., Prairie Pipe Line Co., Tidewater Associated Oil Co. and Rio Grande Oil Co. into one large holding company, which probably will be known as the Commonwealth Oil Corp.

Under the terms being discussed Prairie Pipe Line Co. will receive 14 shares of the holding company stock for each 10 of its own. Prairie Oil & Gas and Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corp. will each receive share for share while Tidewater Associated Oil Co. will receive eight shares of the new company stocks for each 10 shares. Basis of exchange with Rio Grande Oil Co. has not been determined.

Merger is the largest ever sought in the history of the oil industry by a group of the so-called independent companies. Combined assets of the holding company will be in excess of $1,000,000,000 in addition to which it will have the largest pipe line system in the world, distribution in every state and in many foreign countries.

For 1930, which was a poor oil year, the five companies in the proposed merger reported net profit of $41,010,834. Combined net quick assets of these companies at the close of the year amounted to $203,668,897 of which $52,473,167 was in cash.

Following table gives capital and surplus by companies, net quick assets, cash and dividends paid during 1930:

	Cap. & Surp.	Net Assets	Cash	Dividends

Apart from its vast marketing system the merged company will have 16 refineries with a daily capacity of 308,000 barrels of crude oil. Of particular interest, however, in connection with these refineries is their locations. On the East Coast the company will have refineries with a daily capacity of 70,000 barrels, in the Appalachian district it will have a refining capacity of 10,000 barrels, in the Chicago district, 40,000 barrels, in the midcontinent, 55,000 barrels in the interior of Texas 4000 barrels, 31,000 barrels on the Gulf Coast, 10,000 barrels in Wyoming and 88,000 barrels daily on the Pacific Coast. In addition to the above refining capacity which is now in operation the company will have one large refinery at Fort Worth, Tex., which is now being remodeled.

To afford these plants with their crude requirements the merged company will have about 15,000 miles of fully owned lines, with a daily carrying capacity in excess of 200,000 barrels. In addition, it will have an interest in about 2000 additional miles of pipe line. These lines are connected to all important oil-producing fields in the country and run from these to the company's various refineries.

Supplementing this pipe line system the company will have upward of 40 tankers and motor ships in addition to more than 8500 tank cars. Gasoline sales by the five companies in the proposed merger last year were between 1,500,000,000 gallons and 2,000,000,000 gallons.

EXPANSION IS ANNOUNCED

Detroit, Aug. 24—Announcement was made today by Joseph B. Lodge, president of the Dee Wite Co., Inc., that the finance committee of his company had signed the first motor boat and cruiser exhibiting space contract for the 1933 World's Fair at Chicago.

This contract is one of the company's numerous expansion moves within the last few weeks and will be a part of the 1931 advertising budget.

This is the second time a Chicago World's Fair contract has been signed by the Dee Wite interests. The first was in 1893, when The Berry Brothers Co. of that group displayed paints and varnishes.

THOSE NURSES ARE MEAN SOMETIMES

(Canton, Ill., Ledger)

In taking a report over the telephone of new patients admitted to the hospital since Saturday and printed in last night's Ledger, the name of Mrs. Harold Sniff was erroneously given as Mrs. Bernita Sneer.

Of course a good doctor might convince Mrs. Sniff that every symptom indicated that her name was Mrs. Sneer.

And tell her if she was a good patient, she would feel like Mrs. Sniff again in no time.

"Outside of trying to find some spare time," says Genevieve, the kitchen cynic, "there's nothing much more discouraging than having some."

Till you hear me elocute.
Think of all the fun you pass up
For a job of pushing grass up—
All the mad and merry frolic,
All the pleasures alcoholic,
All the jazz and sport and dancing,
All the flappers, eye-entrancing,
All the squeezing and the petting—
Take my word, you'll be regretting;
Shed a tear for life's bright phases
While you elevate the daisies.
Bad to snuff in such a manner,
Lend an ear to Pollyanner.
You will get no second lesson
From Professors Smith and Wesson.

INDIAN KILLED IN FIST FIGHT

Houlton, Me., Aug. 24—Frank Joseph, 20, of Smyrna Mills, an Indian, faces a manslaughter charge in court here today as a result of a fist fight which resulted in the death of Joseph Burnard, 47, another Indian.

The alleged fight occurred near Sheridan, 50 miles from here. Joseph surrendered to Sheriff Welch, after transporting Burnard's body from Sheridan under the impression he was still alive.

The two men set out in a car to sell baskets they had made. Joseph said they bought liquor, and at Sheridan, Burnard declared he wished to stay there. In the ensuing fight, Joseph said, Burnard was knocked unconscious. Not knowing he was dead, Joseph placed Burnard in the car and drove him home.

Heroic Children

They Teach Lesson to Grown-Ups in Battling Dread Paralysis

"METAL LUNGS" AID "BOBBIE" SCHAFFER

In these days of depression, prison rioting and gang outrages, there has been cropping up daily some news that might lead us out of the wilderness if we would but heed it. In any event, it should make our lives, no matter how drear they may be, well worth the living.

It is the news of wholly unselfish sacrifice.

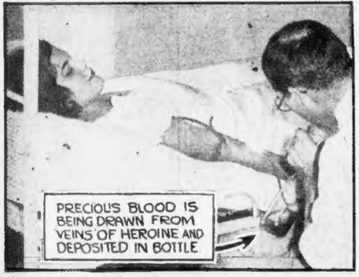
The stories of heroism on the part of infantile paralysis victims stir the imagination and thrill the heart more than has any other news since the tales of high courage came out of the war.

These latest soldiers of the common good, little girls and little boys of an age with your children, are giving the blood from their veins that this newest scourge upon mankind may be defeated. No tie of kinship or friendship prompts their action. They are neither soldiers paid to fight nor firemen paid to risk their lives. It is not their function to give. Being maimed because of the world's ignorance, it is their right to expect from the world more than they bestow upon it.

From the State Hospital for Crippled Children, the Boston Evening American recently had pictures of boys and girls, their bodies warped and racked by this disease, who gave their blood that others might escape the affliction they themselves had suffered. . . . They went to the sacrifice with a glad light in their eyes, with a HOLY, GOD-GIVEN smile upon their faces, glad that they had something to give, which the well could not give, to a world that had given them only sorrow and misshapen little forms. . . .

Recently, too, there were printed the photographs of the two boys who had become "respirator chums." In the midst of their fight for life, they laughed and joked and winced and suffered and gritted their teeth and bore it all like the brave young warriors they are. And the sweat, no doubt, traced down their agonized faces, BUT NEVER A WHIMPER DID THEY UTTER, NEVER A COMPLAINT DID THEY VOICE!

Only Thursday, the Boston Evening American told you Dr. Bigelow's story of the boy, crippled by paralysis, who hitch-hiked 20 miles to give his blood to save some other boy or girl from a fate that had been his. . . . And you were told of the other staunch young patriot, who, having broken his leg after arranging to donate his blood, called an ambulance and was driven to the hospital, NOT TO RECEIVE TREATMENT, BUT TO KEEP A "SERUM DATE" WITH THE CLINIC, the agony of the broken leg forgotten in the exaltation of his valorous fervor.



PRECIOUS BLOOD IS BEING DRAWN FROM VEINS OF HEROINE AND DEPOSITED IN BOTTLE

IRMA ERCOLINA GIVES BLOOD TO HELP OTHERS

And yet, every now and then, some gibbering dolt will inform you that the days of courage, of heroic endeavor, of great bravery and of self-denial are dead!

You will find IN THE PARALYZED FORMS OF THE VALIANT LITTLE HEROES OR TODAY a parallel for every act of heroism in history. You will find courage, too, without parallel, courage that has reached the zenith to which courage may aspire. It is in their patient eyes, in the lines of their drawn, BUT SMILING, faces . . .

And you may find there, too, something of graver import to grown-ups. It is shame; shame for those who whine over some picayunish adversity such as a loss of mere money, or of a job, or of business, or of a trip abroad, or of a new auto. Shame for YOU may be there, if you deserve it, in a face distorted by pain. . . .

Woe unto us if we cannot see, and profit from, the fortitude, the courage, the never-say-die spirit of crippled little children!

"THE FLANDERS CHAIN OF GOOD LUCK. This was sent to my house. Copy it and send it within two hours to persons you wish good luck. This was started by American officers in Flanders and has been around the world 60 times. The one who breaks the chain will have bad luck. It is astonishing how prosperity will come in a few days. Wait and see what happens. In four days it will bring good luck. Send this one and four others to the people you wish good luck. Do not keep this one."

Chain letters—they've been going the rounds since Adam was a pup. What started them? That's easy. They were started and they're kept going by the oldest, commonest emotion in human nature—FEAR. And they'll keep on going as long as human fear holds out. Which, from present indications, will be plenty long.

"But I know of cases where they worked," someone says. "I know a man who refused to send one on. He said they weren't going to get HIM. And he had the awfulest bad luck. His bank closed that very week. Then there was my aunt. Everyone says my aunt is terribly superstitious. They laughed at her because she sat right down and copied that letter and sent it out. But right the next day she rented her spare bedroom to a boarder. Maybe you'll say it was just an accident—"

Not necessarily. These particular cases may have been coincidences. That bank, probably, was getting ready to close weeks before the chain letter arrived. And boarders do rent rooms without Flanders charming. But, accidents aside—GOOD LUCK AND BAD LUCK DO FOLLOW MANY A CHAIN LETTER. But it isn't the chain letter that brings them.

IT'S THE FAITH OR THE FEAR THAT THE CHAIN LETTERS AROUSE.

BELIEVE IN GOOD LUCK, AND IT WILL COME.

BELIEVE IN BAD LUCK, AND IT WILL HAPPEN.

When you "believe"—you expect something, you get ready for something, you concentrate all your forces on a certain result. And the thing you believe, will happen. It may not happen exactly as you expected it to happen. Life sends our answers in queer packages. But you'll get your answer, never doubt . . . THAT ANSWER YOU MADE READY IN YOUR OWN MIND . . . THAT ANSWER YOU INVITED IN YOUR OWN HEART.

Do chain letters work? Have they power? Yes, anything has power if you put power in it, through your fear or faith. Rabbits' feet work. Powdered spiders mixed with dried frogs' legs and stewed in blood, work. Love potions, flavored with finger nails and dandruff, work. Any symbol, however silly, will work if you back it with the terrific dynamite of faith or fear. It's the BELIEF that does the trick.

If the millions of people who have copied and forwarded that fool chain letter had put an equal amount of faith into hard work, decent living, generous love and clean ambition, THERE WOULDN'T BE ROOM IN THE WORLD TO HOLD THEIR GOOD LUCK.

Just Folks

Subject to Mortgage

"Who will buy a lot from me,
   High and dry and well located,
On a street that's bound to be
   In the future populated.
Pressed by other cash demands,
I'm disposing of my lands.
Who will take this off my hands,
      Subject to mortgage?

"Here's another bargain rare.
   I've a dandy duplex dwelling
Which I find I now can spare,
   At a loss this place I'm selling,
Price and terms are very low,
Cash this year is scarce and so
I'll be glad to let it go,
      Subject to mortgage."

Old man Interest takes his dole
   And not once his clutch relaxes;
As the six months onward roll,
   He's as sure as death and taxes.
Thus when market prices break
Loud the cry all mortals make:
"Who will burdens from us take,
      Subject to mortgage?"

New York Day by Day

Diary of Modern Pepys

New York, Aug. 24—Diary of a modern Pepys: To market, buying a ripe Cheddar cheese, and picking up Jack Benny and his lady carried them to the Warwick. Then stopping to see Dave Levy, the haberdasher, who has been a-journeying on the continent, and also W. U. Day, the auto merchant.

Home where awaited a vexed lady telling a monstrous tale against a man high in public life which I do not believe, knowing ways of blackmailers. So laboring awhile and to a tea talking to Harry Silvey, whose gray hair lays the neatest ever I saw, and to Frank Tours, the orchestra conductor.

Joe and Margaret Moore to dinner but left early. My wife and I fell to discussing the evening. I sat on her front porch wearing my first long trousers and grandma passing inquired: "Is 'itty man calling on booful lady in him new suit?" Then to the splenderous Follies and talking later to Ziegfeld, Bernie Sobol and Eddie Welch.

Nothing is quite so difficult as picking up the threads of New York's running story after several weeks absence. The metropolitan changes are so swift and varied that at first blush everything seems copy.

Personal nomination for the slickest fitting suit of the season—Floyd Gibbons' new blue serge.

All the news hot from Gallup, N. M.: "Out here we don't milk. We juice a cow. And a local Indian reads your stuff daily in a Phoenix paper. A Chinese laundryman opened up over a garage one day this spring. That night someone tossed a hoot owl over his transom. He jumped out a window, hit running and has never been back. You probably are looking upon this as the ravings of an old desert rat. Well, I was born in the shadows of the Hotel Astor, was a night waiter at Jack's 11 years and after five years here I talk, act and feel like a native."

New York lazed through a hot summer with the smallest number of roof gardens in 30 years. The only new al fresco experiments were an offering of old-fashioned melodrama—such as Lincoln J. Carter's "Fast Mail"—atop an upper Broadway hotel and Gil Boag's club on the St. Moritz roof. No one knows the why of the roof garden debacle. Like the pug dog and puff sleeves, they simply went out. Fifteen years ago open air cafes atop the Waldorf, Majestic, McAlpin, Astor and the Bossert in Brooklyn were high spots of summer diversion.

I talked to a Japanese juggler recently who can hold three bamboo reeds with spinning plates atop them in each hand while another reed with a spinning plate balances on his forehead. He has been practicing for more than 18 years and tells me his most trying moment was when a waggish stage hand in Portland, Ore., scattered a sneeze powder on his mat during the climax of his spinning. But he held back kerchoos until he took his bow. As mean as it was I still think it a beaut of an idea.

If Liberty Is Not Personal, of What Value Is It?

By BRAND WHITLOCK

(From the "Little Green Shutter," by Brand Whitlock, published by D. Appleton & Co.)

Copyright by Brand Whitlock, 1931.

ONE fine morning the nation awoke to find the Eighteenth Amendment in the Constitution of the United States.

If it was not precisely a coup d'etat, it had some of the disconcerting features of one.

Certainly NO SUCH BLOW HAD EVER BEEN DEALT TO INDIVIDUAL LIBERTY, and there was something ironical in clapping a nation of freemen, just emerged victorious from a war for democracy and liberty, under the tutelage of monitors who were to regulate their personal habits.

The citizens of the republic had always lived in the comfortable illusion that they had inherited all the rights of man and that the Constitution was the palladium of their liberties.

At any rate, whatever their feeling about liberty, or whatever conception they may have had of it, the founding fathers realized that they would never be able to get their constitution accepted by the people unless they put the Bill of Rights in it and gave it something of the political complexion of the Declaration of Independence. COLUMBIA WOULD NOT BE COLUMBIA WITHOUT THE CAP OF LIBERTY.

But since we have gone in for absolute prohibition on a national scale, the supporters of the policy, while willing to subscribe to the doctrine of civil and religious liberty, always pooh-pooh the idea of personal liberty as something unreasonable and preposterous.

BUT WHAT OTHER KIND OF LIBERTY IS THERE? IF LIBERTY IS NOT PERSONAL, OF WHAT VALUE IS IT? WHAT SECURITY, WHAT HAPPINESS, WHAT LIFE CAN IT BESTOW?

Government has gained most of its ground by means of the unwritten constitution, as Professor William Bennett Munro calls it in his enlightening little book, "The Makers of the Unwritten Constitution."

This process which, by a gradual erosion of the powers of the several states, has brought about a steady accretion of power in the Federal Government, is imperceptible, of course, to the ordinary citizen. These changes may enlarge, or they may restrict, the liberties of the people, they may make for democracy or for autocracy.

IT DEPENDS UPON THE PEOPLE WHETHER THEY ARE VIGILANT AND ON THE ALERT, OR INDIFFERENT AND ASLEEP. But the natural tendency is that which Jefferson predicted: "Liberty gives way before government."

He once had the right, as an American, to live his own life as he chose, so long as he didn't interfere with the rights of other people—their rights, not merely their prejudices.

He has always SUPPOSED that the Constitution was devised to conserve this individual and personal right.

He has assumed that it was meant to do precisely the opposite; that is, to prevent the government from exercising any such powers.

He thought that its various checks and balances, and the inhibitions of the Bill of Rights were intended to prevent the Executive and Congress from interfering in his personal rights; that is, he thought that they were INTENDED TO PROTECT HIM FROM PRECISELY SUCH INVASIONS OF HIS LIBERTY AS PROHIBITION.

But whence came this truculent and acrid morality, this almost insane concentration on drinking as the one unpardonable sin? It is customary, I know, to ascribe it to the Puritans. But the Puritans, with all their austere morality, made no objection to the use of spirits; they drank themselves and were regularly, many of them, in the rum trade with the West Indies.

In the whole course of their history, whether in England or New England, THEY NEVER CONDEMNED THE REASONABLE USE OF SPIRITS AS A SIN.

No more did Calvinism, or the followers of John Knox in Scotland.

The Anglican Church never taught any such nonsense, and in our Southern states the drinking customs of the English aristocracy survived right down to the Civil War.

The Catholic Church never taught that the moderate use of spirits was wrong, and even undue indulgence was no more than a venial sin. In fact, NOTHING in the teaching of any of the numerous sects of Christendom, or in the Bible itself, EVER AUTHORIZED THE EXTREME AND UNCOMPROMISING ATTITUDE on this subject adopted in our own time.

Did not St. Paul himself expressly say:

> "Let no man, therefore, judge you in meat, or in drink . . .?"

And yet, in the brief space of two generations, we have seen the rise and growth of a dogma which asserts not only that any use whatever of liquor is a sin, but that alcohol is somewhat a sin in itself.

Now I had often wondered where they had found this amazing doctrine, and so one day I asked our rector, confident that he could tell me, if anyone could. And, sure enough, he knew.

> "Why," he said instantly, "they are Manichaeans, unconsciously perhaps, but Manichaeans."

Unfortunately, however, I hadn't the slightest idea what Manichaeans were, so I confessed my ignorance and he kindly lent me an encyclopedia of theology in which knowledge of this sort was set forth simply and in a manner accessible to my limited intelligence.

I learned that this doctrine of sin as inherent in matter is no new thing, but goes back to a religious system founded by Mani or Manes, or Manichaeus—for the name is variously written—a person who gave his name to a sect that flourished from the third to the fifth century. Mani taught that Satan was co-eternal with God; there were two principles in the universe, Good and Evil, Light and Darkness, and they were in everlasting conflict.

This was no mere figure of speech with Mani. Light was actually and absolutely good, and Darkness was actually and absolutely evil. Evil, therefore, was inherent in all those forms of matter that emanate from Darkness, as wine, for instance, and the flesh of beasts. And when Evil was in anything there was nothing to be done; there was no way to get out; the only course to pursue was to let wine and meat, and all the other products of Darkness, severely alone.

THUS THE PROHIBITIONIST, WHETHER CONSCIOUSLY OR UNCONSCIOUSLY, ARE MANICHAEISTS, and as soon as they grow a little more powerful will no doubt decree Manichaeism to be our established religion, and prohibit a number of other things they don't like, on the simple ground that sin is inherent in them.

The second article in this series, based on quotations from Brand Whitlock's recent book, "The Little Green Shutter," will appear Thursday, August 27.
